JAMES T. WOODWARD, THE BANKER, IS DEAD

Hanover National's President Was Clearing House Chairman in the Panic of 1907.

HELPED TO TIDE OVER CRISIS

Won His Own Way and Built Up a Bank with $100,000,000 Deposits—A Strong Figure in Finance.

James T. Woodward, President of the Hanover National Bank, Director in many other large financial institutions, and a banker who played an important part in minimizing the effect of the money panic of 1907, died yesterday at his home, 9 East Fifty-sixth Street. He was stricken with apoplexy nearly a week ago, shortly after having attended a meeting of the New York Hospital Trustees, of which he was one. He was nearly seventy years old, and for that reason his friends had little hope for his recovery. Early yesterday morning he fell asleep and did not awake again. Those who were at his bedside at the last say he did not know that death was near.

As head of one of the largest banking institutions in the country, taking an active part in the financial affairs of this city and Baltimore, Mr. Woodward was well known to most men of large affairs. As Chairman of the Clearing House Committee in 1907, when the eyes of the financial world were focused on that body and bankers were fearful of what the next day might bring forth, his foresight, resourcefulness, and grasp on the situation here came into National prominence. Before that, however, it had been well known, in New York at least, that the growth of the Hanover Bank in the last twenty-five years had been due largely to his ability, for not only was he personally able but his keen perception of the qualities of men enabled him to gather about him those who could best contribute to the upbuilding of a great banking institution.

Came of Colonial Stock.

Mr. Woodward was born in Anne Arundel County, Md., not far from Annapolis, the State capital. His father was Henry Williams Woodward, a successful farmer and a descendant of the Woodwards of Colonial days. His mother, Mary E. Woodward, was also of Colonial ancestry. As a boy Mr. Woodward studied in the country schools near his home. Afterward he went to Baltimore to complete his education, equipped by his early life in the country, with a constitution which was to serve him well in the strenuous days to come.

While the civil war was in progress Mr. Woodward was completing his education. Soon after peace was declared he came to New York to seek his fortune. He was employed by the importing house of Ross, Campbell & Co., and it was not long before the firm recognized the sound business judgment and shrewd observation of trade conditions manifested by the Maryland lad.

Mr. Woodward's knowledge of business grew with his progress in the firm. Presently he began to look forward to a career as a banker. Early in the seventies he became a Director in the Hanover National Bank. His acquaintance with men of importance in the financial district was broadened and his experience was matured. A few years after he became a Director of the Hanover National he and his brother, William Woodward, Jr., who died a few years ago, bought the large interest of J. & J. Stewart, bankers in the Hanover Bank.

That was in 1877. In the same year Mr. Woodward was elected President of the Hanover. He retained that post till his death. The deposits of the bank when he took charge were $6,000,000. Under his administration they grew until to-day they are in the neighborhood of $100,000,000.

Wise in Financial Councils.

A business principle adopted many years ago by Mr. Woodward was one which Walter Bagehot outlined in his essay "The Growth of Capital." It was that "a man of business ought not to be overcautious; he ought to take what seem good thing in his trade pretty much as they come; he won't get any good by trying to see through a millstone. But he ought to put all his caution into his 'reserve fund;' he may depend on it he will be 'done' somehow, before long, and probably when he least thinks it; he ought to heap up a great fund in a shape in which he can use it against the day on which he wants it."

Mr. Woodward built up a large reserve fund for the Hanover National, not too large to preclude the payment of 10 per cent. dividends to its stockholders, yet sufficiently strong to enable the institution to accommodate its customers even in times of great stringency. In the discussions preliminary to large investments and in negotiations which preceded bond sales by the United States Treasury his views always inclined toward conservatism, and they were usually accepted by his business associates, for long experience had proved to them that his judgment was sound.

His sphere of influence was far broader than the Presidency of the Hanover National Bank, great as that is. He was a Director in the Union Trust Company of New York, the Birmingham Realty Company, the Birmingham Trust and Savings Company, the First National Bank of Baltimore, the Greenwich Bank, the Madison Square Garden Company, and the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company of Baltimore. On Oct. 4, 1898, he was chosen President of the New York Clearing House Association. He had not sought this post of honor, but had earned it by many years of conservative and successful banking.

Many of the men of large affairs in this city and elsewhere counted Mr. Woodward their warm friend, and were glad to receive his advice. Associated with him in the Directorate of the Hanover National were such men as William Rockefeller, James Stillman, Isidor Straus, Vernon Brown, William Barbour, and many others whose names are well known in the financial district.

Grover Cleveland was his close personal friend, and the banker was a delegate to the National Convention in Chicago which nominated Mr. Cleveland for the Presidency in 1884. In politics Mr. Woodward was an old-line Democrat. Only once did he refrain from voting for a Democratic Presidential candidate; that was in 1896 when free silver was the paramount issue. Mr. Woodward then joined the Sound Money party and cast his vote for McKinley.

An Outdoors Man, Too.

Like several of the other men who figure prominently in the financial district Mr. Woodward was an outdoors man. Until a few years ago he spent much of his time in the open air, riding, hunting, and fishing. His home in East Fifty-sixth Street has many of his trophies of the chase. He was also a member of the Union Club, the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Riding, New York Clubs, and the Maryland Club of Baltimore.

Whenever he could spare the time Mr. Woodward would take a train for Maryland and repair to his farm near Bowie,

MOB THE FRENCH PREMIER.

Revolutionists Fire Revolvers as M. Briand Opens the Campaign.

SAINT CHAMOND, France, April 10.—The opening of the electoral campaign here to-day by Premier Briand was marked by violent counter-demonstrations by Anarchist and revolutionary groups, who interrupted the Premier's speech to his constituents by smashing windows and shooting off revolvers.

Premier Briand's address was marked by a spirit of moderation and peace, and he urged the attainment of social reforms by pacific and gradual methods.

"The republic," he said, "owes to all equal justice and liberty. She cannot make herself a persecutor without failing in essential principles."

At this point the Premier's words were drowned by the crash of a shower of bricks through the windows and the cracking of revolvers. The speaker continued, however, and detailed the work of social reform which had been accomplished by the outgoing Parliament. He then outlined the Government's programme, in which electoral reform occupied a prominent place. Representation must be more homogeneous, he said, and added that the predominance of petty local interests had nullified the financial efforts of the nation.

Other measures to which attention would be given, the Premier went on, included the proper definition of the status of State employes, in order to prevent a recurrence of the recent postal strikes, and the establishment of a system of arbitration between workmen and employers, which he calculated would in a great measure obviate strikes.

"Internal peace," said M. Briand, "is as important as external peace."

As the Premier left the city the manifestants crowded around him, and there was a sharp tussle between them and his supporters, many blows being exchanged and some shots fired in the air. A number of persons were arrested.

The Opposition candidate, the Socialist, M. Lorris, who was thought to have been responsible for the demonstration, strongly disavowed all part in it. The residents of Saint Chamond strongly deprecate the occurrence as a reflection on the city. An individual who was arrested and was trying to make his way into the banquet, which was attended by the Premier, was found to be a Spanish Anarchist. He was armed with a revolver.

AIRSHIP FALLS ON AUTO.

J. C. Mars Escapes Death In 75-Foot Drop by Landing on a Car.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 10.—Losing control of a Curtiss biplane, which he was operating at a height of seventy-five feet, J. C. Mars plunged downward at terrific speed into the infield of the aviation course here to-day, alighting on top of a seven-passenger touring car, in which were seated three women and two children.

The canopy over the touring car saved the lives of its occupants, only one of whom was slightly injured. The biplane was smashed to bits, and Mars was caught under the wreckage, but escaped with nothing worse than a severely bruised and wrenched knee and a slight cut on his chin.

In the automobile were Mrs. Edward Ritter, Miss Edna Ritter, Louis Ritter, and Mrs. Wilmer Smith and child. Mrs. Ritter was the only one injured, receiving a slight cut on the shoulder. Mr. Ritter was standing at the side of the car. He had just finished fastening up the canopy and was knocked down by one of the planes of the machine.

The accident brought to a thrilling close the first aviation meet in Memphis. Thousands of people followed the aviator in his flight across the mile course, and saw his machine caught in a sudden gust of wind, spin round like a top at a right angle to its original course, and then plunge downward. Terrified screams from women were heard on all sides as the biplane landed squarely on the automobile.

The occupants of the car huddled on the floor of the tonneau as the biplane struck the front of the automobile and then toppled over on the canopy. Mars had shut off his engine when the aeroplane started downward.

His first public flight was made at the Memphis meet, and yesterday he carried off the honors by his high flights, skill, and daring. He succeeded in equaling Curtiss's quick start record of 5 4-5 seconds. Only short flights were attempted to-day by Curtiss and Mars before the accident on account of the state of the weather.

FOLLOWS FRIEND TO GRAVE.

Danner, Heartbroken When McGinnis Went to Potter's Field, Kills Himself.

James E. Danner, a machinist, put his last quarter in the gas meter at his boarding house, 2,829 West Twenty-third Street, Coney Island, early yesterday morning, unscrewed a tap, and after covering his head and shoulders with a couple of blankets, filled his lungs full of gas and died. He was found lying by the meter with the blankets still wrapped close about his head a little later, when gas fumes led his landlady, Mrs. Nellie Lennon, to the hallway.

Danner's acquaintances say that the death of his closest friend, James McGinnis, a few days ago led the machinist to take his own life. For many years Danner and McGinnis, a carpenter, who used to live at Herman's Hotel on Coney Island, were inseperable. They grew up together in Uniontown, Penn., and when McGinnis decided to go to live on Coney Island Danner shouldered his machinist's tools and went along.

McGinnis choked to death while eating supper Monday night. Some one at the supper table in Herman's Hotel had just told a joke, and McGinnis laughed until a hunk of beef became lodged in his windpipe.

Danner was out of work, and had very little money left. He tried to raise funds to keep McGinnis out of Potter's Field, but Danner could find few friends who were willing to contribute, and the fund was too small to give McGinnis a decent burial. On Saturday last he was buried in Potter's Field.

Now Danner probably will be buried there, too.

SEVEN SHOT, 4 DIE, IN NEW TONG WAR

"Four Brothers" and "Hip Sings" the Victims Here and in Philadelphia.

ON LEONGS THE ASSAILANTS

Park Row Crowd Captures Slayer of One—One Murder in a Doyers Street Gambling House.

While hymns floated out from the Christian missions through the several little crooked streets of Chinatown yesterday afternoon three Chinese were shot in three different parts of the district, two of them dying of their wounds. Chinatown was filled with police after the first shooting, but that did not stop the other two.

In Philadelphia four men were shot; two died of their wounds immediately and a third will probably die. In both cities it was the same old war of the Tongs renewed. Here members of the Four Brothers were the victims, and in Philadelphia the Hip Sing Tong, their allies, suffered. In all the cases members of the rival On Leong Tong were the aggressors.

The first shooting here took place at 1:30 o'clock, and the third at 4:30. Chinatown was full of laundrymen and truck farmers, who had come in for their weekly recreation among their own kind. If the outside world thinks that two murders gave them any large excitement the outside world is mistaken. The Americans who happened to see the killings ran about and talked loudly, and pushed and shoved, and then gathered in small groups to exchange erroneous information. But all afternoon the few Chinamen who were not inside back rooms gambling, eating, or smoking walked through Mott, Doyers, and Pell Streets as leisurely as if they had heard of nothing, knew of nothing except the soothing hymns that drifted through the open windows of the mission houses.

The first assault was upon the most distinguished of the three victims—Chu Moy Yen, 40 years old, an active member of the Four Brothers Society, for fourteen years a Chinese railroad agent, representing the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. He lives at 53 Bayard Street and has a wife and four children. He is wealthy as Chinese in America go, active in Chinese charities, and generally liked and respected.

Yen stepped out of the lower door of the Port Arthur Restaurant at 9 Mott Street at 1:30 o'clock, and took a few steps in the direction of Chatham Square. As he passed 5 Mott Street a Chinaman stepped out from a doorway and fired once from a revolver at Chu Moy Yen. The bullet struck him in the right thigh, and he fell to the street. His assailant ran to him and fired three more times at him, wounding him in the other thigh and in the right leg.

Accounts differ as to what became of Yen's assailant. Some say he ran back into the Port Arthur Restaurant building, but the police could find no trace of him. Others declare that he ran to Chatham Square and up to the elevated station. The police do not know what became of him. Yen was removed to the Hudson Street Hospital. His wounds were not serious, and he was ready to go home last night.

After this shooting the police reserves were sent from the Elizabeth Street and Oak Street police stations. The few Chinese in the streets went walking about as innocently as ever.

A peaceful half hour slipped by. At 2 o'clock Chung Fook of 18 Mott Street, supposedly a Four Brothers man, was walking down Park Row, having just left Chinatown. At Pearl Street a Chinaman stepped up behind him, got around somewhat to the side of his victim, and shot him three times in the chest. Fook fell to the street and died almost instantly. His assailant ran across the street, but a number of Americans, of whom there were many parading the sidewalks, laid hold of him, in spite of his pistol, and turned him over to a policeman. At the Oak Street Station, where he was locked up on the charge of homicide, he said he was Chen Hen, 33 years old, a clerk, of 22½ Pell Street. He is a member of the On Leong Tong, the police said.

It was two hours later when a lot of Chinamen came running out of 15 Doyers Street. The police found then that a third shooting had taken place. On the outside door of the ground-floor store there is painted in yellow letters "Social Club." Inside that door is a sort of anteroom extending all the way across the narrow building, and away over to one side of the inside wall of the partition is a little door. That leads into the "Social Club," which is hard to see from the outside.

The "Social Club" is one small room, having in it two long-legged tables, tall enough to bring the top to a Chinaman's shoulder. These are covered with grass matting, and above them hang rows of electric lights, meant so to illuminate the tops of the grass-covered tables that no man can cheat at the gambling without being seen. The players stand up to play. At the far end of each of the tables, which stand lengthwise of the room, sits a sort of banker. Their backs are against the rear wall, and between the two is a little door. This opens into a little room in behind, which communicates in some devious way with the roof.

The police do not know what took place in the "Social Club" yesterday afternoon. When they rushed into the room they found a Chinaman lying on the floor with two bullets in his right side. He was dead. It was said that he was Ong Mung, 55 years old, of 16 Pell Street, who made a living in the gambling rooms.

The lights above the tables were burning brightly, the few chairs in the room were overturned, and the gambling paraphernalia was mussed altogether. Bending over the dead man was Wung Ching of 16 Pell Street, who was arrested as a suspicious person. He had remained behind, most likely, because he knew the dead man, they both having the same address, and because he was too old and fat to run.

The "Social Club" is a Four Brothers organization, and the seats at the head of the two tables are occupied generally by Four Brothers men. A Chinaman said that when the banker at each table lost $30 handrunning he was changed, hoping thus to change the luck running against the bank. A Four Brothers man had occupied the tall chair of the table on the left as one goes in, almost all yesterday afternoon, but a Chinaman who seemed to know what he was talking about said he had been changed, Ong Mung, supposedly not a Four Brothers man, taking his place.

The police profess to believe that Ong Mung's murderers reached the little rear room from the roof, suddenly opened the door at his right, stuck the pistol to his

RELIGIOUS FANATIC MURDERS PREACHER

Frank Skala, Editor of a Pittsburg Periodical, Is Shot Down by a Russian.

ELDER ALSO MORTALLY HURT

The Madman Makes His Attack After Church—He Holds the Crowd at Bay and Gets Away Safely.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 10.—Frank Skala, editor of The Christian Journal, a religious periodical published in Bohemian, after preaching this morning in the Second Presbyterian Church Mission of Wood's Run, North Side, was shot dead outside the church by Michael Rewdicz, a Russian religious fanatic. The man also tried to kill John Gray, an elder of the mission. Gay is in St. John's Hospital with three bullets in his body, and can scarcely recover. The fanatic escaped.

Mr. Skala was the leader among the Bohemians of Western Pennsylvania, among whom he had worked for some years in Coraopolis. Last Sunday the Rev. Andrew Kovac, the pastor of the mission, announced that Mr. Skala would preach to-day in his absence, and the little church was crowded to hear him. Mr. Skala spoke of the Christian martyrs and declared his willingness to die for the faith.

"At any moment that God wants my life," he said, "I am willing to lay it down."

Rewdicz, who belongs to many Russian societies, attended the service and for a time sat quiet. He greeted Mr. Skala at the beginning and read in his turn from a children's leaflet. But he took exception to some remarks in the sermon, and, rising, demanded in an angry tone that he be heard.

"I will answer your questions after church and outside the church," said Mr. Skala.

Rewdicz sat down, and the preacher appeared to forget all about the incident. When the service was over he left the building arm in arm with Mr. Gay on the way to the home of one of the parishioners with whom they were to dine. They were passing through the groups of the congregation who had stopped outside to chat, when Rewdicz forced his way up to them.

"What can I do for you, my good friend?" said Mr. Skala, attempting to take his hand.

The Russian began to argue and gesticulate. He planted himself in front of the editor, pulled a revolver from his pocket, and fired.

Mr. Skala dropped dead in his tracks, hit in the jaw and the temple, and Gay started to run. He threw up his hand to protect himself, and the first bullet broke his thumb. The second hit his head and he fell, apparently dead. Rewdicz shot him again, and then stepped away with a wild laugh.

Panic seized the congregation as the shooting began, and many persons were trampled upon in the wild rush to escape. A few stood their ground and threw stones at Rewdicz, who yet had some charges left in his revolver. He waved it threateningly and backed up the steps into the little Mission church.

A crowd of 500 soon collected, but the murderer held them all at bay with his revolver for about thirty minutes. He prevented Scala's body from being lifted from where it fell, and kept off any assistance from Gay, who showed some signs of life.

Nearly all the windows of the church were broken by the shower of shots, but Rewdicz was unhurt. At the end of half an hour, with a revolver in each hand, he stepped out of the church, drove the crowd up and down the street, and raced for a street car line at the top of the hill. The crowd chased him, but fell back as he turned and fired at it.

At the top of the hill he came up with a suburban farmer named Case in his buggy. He made him alight, took his vehicle, and fled into the country with it. Late in the afternoon the horse was found wandering about some miles from North Pittsburg. The murderer is still at large, and is known to be well supplied with ammunition.

Rewdicz, who appears to have been a Russian student of standing, came to America two years ago, and for five weeks has hung about the Pittsburg district. He lodged at the Salvation Army barracks, but was at variance with its teachings. He is thought to have become demented on the question of religion and Russian secret societies, and was noticeable for the curious patches he wore on his ragged clothes.

Three weeks ago he became engaged in a heated argument with Skala over the policy of his periodical, and volunteered to write some editorials for him. Next day some wild, rambling articles were sent to the editor, and as he did not print them Rewdicz wanted to attack him. An anonymous letter was sent to Mr. Skala warning him he would be shot dead in the pulpit to-day.

FALL IN RACE KILLS M. P.

Seventy-Year-Old Rider in Parliamentary Steeplechase Was Leading.

LONDON, April 10.—The parliamentary steeplechases, which have not been run for three years, were revived on Saturday and were attended by a fatal accident. The races were held at Epping in the presence of a great crowd of legislators, racing men, prominent Government officials, and others. Sir William Grantham, Judge of the Queens Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, and the Right Hon. James William Lowther, Speaker of the House, acted as Judges.

In the principal event of the day, the House of Commons race, there were fourteen starters, the Hon. Neil Primrose, the youngest son of the Earl of Rosebery, and Viscount Castlereagh being the favorites. While leading at a fast pace the horse ridden by the septuagenarian member, the Right Hon. James Tomkinson of Cheshire, fell at a fence. Mr. Tomkinson was thrown and sustained a concussion of the brain. He died to-day. Mr. Tomkinson was elected for the Crewe Division of Cheshire in 1900 and was a Liberal.

MANHATTAN HAS A DRYER SUNDAY

Wet Spots Mostly in the Slums, but No District in Brooklyn Lacked an Oasis.

THE BRONX WAS MORE ARID

Lockouts in Most Places Where the Saloons Did Business, and More Caution Observed Than a Week Ago.

New York was dryer yesterday than it has been for many a Sunday—since the dayst when Theodore Roosevelt was a Police Commissioner, some said. Most of the saloons not operating under Raines law hotel licenses decided not to take chances with Mayor Gaynor's new plan of enforcing the liquor law. The saloon men had no way of knowing who the policemen were who had this work in hand, and remembering that last Sunday more than sixty of their number had their names submitted to the District Attorney as lawbreakers, most of them decided it would pay better not to keep open.

All over Manhattan saloons which had not been closed on Sunday in years were shut tight yesterday, and only in a few widely separated sections of the city was there anything resembling defiance of the law. Chinatown and the lower Bowery were in the defiant zones, Chinatown being perhaps the most flagrant offender. A big batch of affidavits is expected from there.

On the Bowery, although many saloons not operating under Raines law licenses were doing business, it was not so easy to get a drink as in Chinatown. Most of the saloons had lookouts at the side doors, and admitted only such persons as they knew. In the "Hell's Kitchen" section, however, many saloons did business with little or no apparent attempt at concealment.

In the Tenderloin, where the excise law has for years been looked upon as more of a joke than anything else, there was a real drought. Those saloons that did business only admitted those known to the man who swung open the side doors. The district higher uptown, while it had dozens of closed saloons which usually do a thriving back-room business on Sundays, had a few cautiously opened places, which, however, served only old customers. All of these places had "blinkies," as they were known in the days of Mayor Strong, on the watch for plain-clothes men.

In the Bronx, also, it was noticeable that the law was obeyed to a greater extent than it has been in years. In Westchester, the place of Louis Olip, President of the Westchester Liquor Dealers' Association, famous as among those visited by the excise raiders, Keenan and Cunningham, now dismissed from the force, was closed tight, as were others found open by the two policemen weeks ago. In other parts of the Bronx the saloons were either closed or did business only for those known to be safe, so far as excise enforcement was concerned.

Brooklyn, however, had few "dry" spots. Side doors swung as merrily as usual in all parts of the borough, although some of the more careful of the liquor dealers posted lookouts to watch for unfamiliar faces. But the fact that about thirty warrants had been issued on Saturday for saloon keepers who failed to expose their bars to view from the street last Sunday was the cause of many screens being removed.

No announcement of the probable number of affidavits to be submitted to District Attorney Whitman as a result of yesterday's excise supervision was made by the police last night. All affidavits are expected to be in the hands of the District Attorney by to-morrow night. The affidavits will be made on the new forms given to the police by Mr. Whitman on Saturday.

One excise arrest in the city was reported, as against the two made a week ago.

SHOCK KILLS WOMAN AT FIRE.

Mrs. Scheuer Was Overcome While Fighting the Blaze—Others Faint.

Samuel Scheuer, a policeman, connected with the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, and his brother, Julius Scheuer, a cigar manufacturer, both of whom live at 329 East Houston Street, went out last night, and Julius's wife, Emma, went to call upon Mrs. Kate Scheuer, her sister-in-law. Several other women dropped in. At 10 o'clock the women heard some one in the rear cry "Fire!" Running to the back window they saw a woodshed in the rear of the house blazing.

Mrs. Kate Scheuer, seizing a bucket, began to run from the kitchen sink to the window and pour water on the fire. The other women became panic-stricken. After pouring out three or four buckets Mrs. Scheuer dropped the pail, cried out "I'm dying," and fell to the floor.

Mrs. Emma Scheuer fell, too, in a faint, followed by all the other women in the room.

Policeman Reigel of the Union Market Station, who had heard the screams, accompanied by Benjamin Kirchstein, a near-by druggist, went to the second-floor apartment. They found that Mrs. Kate Scheuer had died from shock. Mrs. Emma Scheuer was removed to Bellevue Hospital, and at midnight she hadn't recovered consciousness. The other women were revived and went home.

Meanwhile the small blaze in the back yard had been put out by the firemen, the damage being less than $100.

ELIOT'S VIEW OF EUTHANASIA.

He Opposes Deliberate Shortening of Life, but Not the Use of Anodynes.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 10.—President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University takes exception to the reports that he favors putting people afflicted with an incurable disease out of existence. The doctor has thus set forth his views:

"What does it matter, in a hopeless case, if the patient's life is shortened by a few hours or more if he is thereby relieved from excruciating pain? I know that I would prefer such a course if I were in a hopeless condition and in extreme pain.

"I do not believe in the right of any one to kill another in order to put the patient out of his agony, but I do believe that we should avail ourselves of these anodynes, which nature beneficently provides, even though their use in a hopeless case may shorten the brief remaining span of life."

ATTACK TREASURY; 17 DEAD.

Brave Fight Against Robbers in Town in Ciscaucasia.

TIFLIS, Transcaucasia, April 10.—Thirty robbers attacked the Treasury at Kiziiar, a town of Ciscaucasia, a few days ago.

The military guard made a brave defense and seventeen were killed in the conflict, including five soldiers, a non-commissioned officer, the cashier and bookkeeper of the institution, and several natives.

YOUNG KNOX NOT AT HOME.

Report That He Was Seeking Father's Forgiveness Not Confirmed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—No trace can be found in Washington to-night of Philander C. Knox, Jr., and his youthful bride, who, according to a published report, had started for Washington to obtain the forgiveness of the young man's father. At the home of Secretary Knox it was said that the bridegroom was not there, and had not been there to-day. The inference was that the couple was not in Washington.

It was unofficially reported here this afternoon that young Knox had gone West, though this report could neither be traced to its source nor confirmed.

BISHOP DOANE FAINTS.

Falls to Floor in Troy Church and Cuts His Head—Condition Not Serious.

TROY, N. Y., April 10.—The Right Rev. Bishop William Croswell Doane of All Saints' Cathedral, Albany, and head of the Albany Episcopal Diocese, was seized with a fainting spell while administering the rite of confirmation to a class at St. John's Church, in this city to-day.

Bishop Doane is a man of large frame and is well along in years. In falling he struck his head on the stone floor of the chancel and was quite severely cut. He was immediately removed to St. John's Rectory adjoining the church, where medical aid was called in. Later Drs. E. R. Hunt and Howard Van Rensselaer of Albany were summoned. His daughter, Mrs. Gardner of New York, was notified by telegraph, and she came to Troy.

Bishop Doane will remain here to-night. The physicians state that his condition is not serious.

DANGER IN USING RADIUM.

Royal Society of Medicine Warned Against Cancer Treatment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 10.—Serious warning of dangers in the use of radium were uttered at the last meeting of the Royal Society of Medicine. One of the most renowned British experts on cancer warned the members of the society that clinical workers with radium may ultimately find that instead of curing what they think is cancer, they have succeeded in producing cancer.

Another leading expert observed that after years of experience he had never known deep-seated cancer to be influenced by radium, and it was declared that the "cancers" which had been cured by radium were indistinguishable from mere ordinary inflamed tissue.

CLUES TO ABDUCTED GIRL.

Newburg Child Believed to Have Been Taken to Arden.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., April 10.—Mrs. John Cooper, mother of Azenath Cooper, the twelve-year-old girl who was kidnapped from the home of Mrs. John McCrimmon, left here this afternoon for Arden, because of a report that the child had been seen there with her abductor.

Mrs. Simmons, mother-in-law of W. H. H. Sperry, who is missing and who is said to have taken the child away, says Sperry had taked of a job at Arden, and when he left home he dressed himself in his best clothing, saying he was going in quest of work. The local police are following a clue that locates the man and child in the adjoining town of New Windsor.

Sperry is said to have had a great affection for the child, and to have frequently remarked that when she was old enough he would gain possession of her. While he was in Newburg several years ago he boarded at the home of Mrs. McCrimmon, who then lived on Montgomery Street. She has since moved to what is known as the Riverside flats, and he spent half a day in trying to locate her. Then he and the girl disappeared.

JOSEPH PULITZER, JR., TO WED

He Will Marry Miss Eleanor Wickham of St. Louis in June.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 10.—The marriage of Joseph Pulitzer, Jr., second son of the publisher of The New York World and St. Louis Post Dispatch, to Miss Eleanor Wickham, daughter of Mrs. Edmund F. Wickham of 28 Vandeventer Place, will take place in June.

Miss Wickham was educated at Dobbs Ferry, and was a débutante of last season, when she was maid of honor at the Queen of the Veiled Prophets' ball, the annual social event of St. Louis. On her mother's side she is closely related to the Catlins, one of the oldest families of this city.

Mr. Pulitzer has spent much of his time here during the last three years, looking after his father's newspaper property, and intends to make St. Louis his home after a wedding trip abroad.

HE BLEW HIMSELF UP.

Reichstein Was Cleaning Clothes with Naphtha—He May Die.

Victor Reichstein, a chauffeur, of 1,004 Madison Avenue, went into the bathroom yesterday with two suits of clothes to clean. He had some naphtha with him.

About a minute later East Harlem was shaken by an explosion, and Reichstein was hurled out of the bathroom, unconscious, with his legs and body severely burned. He was picked up and hurried away to Harlem Hospital, where it was said that he might not live.

The explosion lifted Reichstein's pet dog that was lying on a chair in the parlor out of the window. He was saved by the fire escape. Tenants in the house stampeded downstairs, not knowing what had happened. Firemen put out the fire that started, confining it to the Reichstein flat.

AKED GETS $324,000 FOR HIS NEW CHURCH

Congregation Gives $162,000 in Twenty-eight Minutes—Then Rockefeller Gives the Rest.

SONG AND SERMON TO FIT

The Pleasures of Giving—Night Services in New Theatre While New Church Structure Is Building.

In exactly twenty-eight minutes $324,000 was subscribed by the congregation of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church at its service yesterday morning, after the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked, had made an appeal for $500,000 with which to build a new church. Half of the $324,000 was contributed by John D. Rockefeller, who promised dollar for dollar up to $250,000.

The largest individual contribution outside of Mr. Rockefeller's was that of Edgar L. Marston, who contributed $25,000. Mr. Marston is President of the Board of Trustees of the Church. Colgate Hoyt gave $10,000, and the family of the late L. Horatio Bigelow gave a similar sum as a memorial to Mr. Bigelow. Harry Hubbard also contributed $10,000, while Mrs. Hubbard added $1,000.

There were several $5,000 donations, including one from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mrs. A. P. Prentiss, Edward A. Allen, Mrs. J. Hayes, J. F. Comey and family, A. S. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burr, and "A Friend." Mrs. John D. Rockefeller and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., contributed $1,000 each. Dr. Aked himself gave $1,000 and Mrs. Aked $250.

Some of the other subscribers and the sums they gave are Miss Burr, $500; Charles Beggs and family, $3,000; Dr. L. Emmett Holt, $2,400; a friend, $2,000; Mr. Morris, $1,000; Mrs. Morris, $500; Miss Morris, $500; Eugene Paddock and family, $1,000; Mrs. Guernsey, $1,000; Mrs. Lamont, $1,000; Mr. Aldridge, $500, (perhaps more later;) family of Mr. Ballard $1,000; name unannounced, $1,000; a friend from Chicago, $1,000; Dr. and Mrs. Saunders, $500; Mr. Fish, $500; Mrs. Fish, $100; Mrs. Frank Leslie, $500; Mr. Corbett, $500; Mr. Bushnell, $500; a friend, $500; W. H. Hayes, $400; Dr. Addison Moore, $250; Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Smith, $500; Louise, B. J., Harry, and J. Smith, $100 each; Mr. Love, $400; man not a member, $350; Ambrose R. Clark, $200; Thomas Lockwood of Boston, $100, and J. P. Elder, $200.

Dr. Aked had announced on the previous Sunday that yesterday was to be the day when he would ask for $500,000 with which to build a new church, the work to begin next June.

A Song to Fit the Occasion.

After opening the services Dr. Aked led in the singing of the second hymn, "Consecration," one couplet of which ran:

Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withold.

Then the sermon began, Dr. Aked taking his text from the second book of Samuel, chapter xxiv., verse 24.

And the King said unto Araunaj, nay, but I will surely buy it of thee, at a price: neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which cost me nothing. So David bought the threshing floor and the oxen for 50 shekels of silver.

Dr. Aked emphasized the spirit of giving from the time when David built the temple described by Samuel down to the present day, dwelling with force on the architects and church builders of the Middle Ages, whose spirit of building costly and elaborate edifices he urged his congregation to emulate.

Dr. Aked said that the spirit of giving was essential to self-respect, and that without self-respect we would cease to live. Continuing, he said:

"Our modern idea is to get a great deal for nothing. It is man's life to strive to get. If you acquit yourself gallantly in this strife to get, you may yet be a benefactor to humanity. But woe if in this strife to get we cease to be human."

The sermon over, Dr. Aked stepped down from the pulpit and began by telling of an old washwoman who had contributed the first dollar to the building of the present edifice in 1863.

Dr. Aked said that Mr. Bushnell was the first in this instance to emulate the washwoman's example, who gave her mite to the late Dr. Armitage.

"Mr. Bushnell promised me $500 two years," said Dr. Aked, who then said that he himself had contributed $1,000 and Mrs. Aked $250.

Asked for $500,000.

"We need $500,000," said Dr. Aked. "I ask you to give it to us to-day. It is as easy to raise it in a few hours or in two or three days as it is to raise it in a dilatory fashion in four or five months. Contribute something. Let it be $10, or $5, or $500, or $5,000, or more.

"I want all the congregation to contribute. We do not desire the church to be the gift of a handful of rich men. You don't want to put your pastor in the position of being an employe of two or three rich men. No self-respecting minister would preach for five minutes under such conditions."

The Finance Committee then was requested to distribute the pledge cards, on which the subscriptions were to be made. These provided for the payment of the subscriptions in four parts, as follows: One-fourth on or before June 1, 1910; one-fourth on or before Nov. 1, 1910; one-fourth on or before March 1, 1911; one-fourth on or before Aug. 1, 1911.

The committee, after distributing the cards, collected them and turned them over to Dr. Aked, who read off the amounts and the donors as quickly as he received them. Ambrose R. Clark, the Assistant Treasurer of the church, kept a tally, informing Dr. Aked from time to time of the amount subscribed.

How the Gifts Came In.

One of the ten-dollar subscriptions was signed, but was not announced, as the donor desired to be known only as "A Jew." Dr. Aked thanked the donor. Sandwiched in between two five-thousand-dollar contributions was one from L. Schmidt for $2.

When $150,000 had been subscribed—apart from the Rockefeller contributions—Dr. Aked said:

"Mr. Clark tells me we have $150,000. We need $100,000 more. Let us raise that other $100,000."

Contributions of $100 and lesser amounts began to come in. One was from a Portland (Me.) visitor. Then came $60 from six members of a family named Morris from Lansing, Mich. Dr. Aked urged the congregation to hasten with their subscriptions.

"The ungodly curiosity of the outside world will want to know all about this," he said. "There is not a newspaper in this country or in Great Britain that won't have all that occurred here to-morrow morning. Now, brethren, make your pledges to-day."

When $162,000 had been subscribed at the end of twenty-eight minutes, Dr. Aked expressed his thanks, saying:

"I'm proud of you and very grateful. For this great gift let us sing, 'Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow.'"

After the services two reporters approached John D. Rockefeller. He recognized them, and put his hand on the shoulder of one and whispered in his ear:

"I haven't a thing to say. But don't tell the other reporter."

He smiled at his little joke, and then turned to speak to two members of the church who came to him with extended hands.

While the new church is being built the services will be held in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church on Sunday mornings, and at night probably in The New Theatre, if suitable arrangements can be made.

ROOSEVELT COUNTED AS TAFT SUPPORTER

Longworth's Alignment with the President Believed to Show Father-in-Law's Attitude.

TROUBLE FOR WICKERSHAM

'nsurgents Angry at His Talk of Treason and Bitter Replies Are Expected in Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Of the many important political speeches made last night by the President, the Attorney General, Senator Lodge, and party leaders of standing all over the country none has created such an impression as that delivered here by Representative Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of ex-President Roosevelt, before the League of Republican Clubs. In his speech, which came late in the evening, Mr. Longworth declared himself a flat-footed and thoroughgoing Taft man.

Mr. Longworth's speech is considered the nearest approach to anything like an expression of Col. Roosevelt's attitude toward his successor that has reached Washington in several months. The importance of Mr. Longworth's enthusiastic indorsement of President Taft, his policies, and accomplishments is still further underscored by the fact that he delivered it only two days before Col. Roosevelt's meeting with Gifford Pinchot, the deposed Forester. No one in Washington believes that Mr. Longworth would have put himself on record as strongly as he did without assurance that he was acting in accordance with his father-in-law's latest views.

Roosevelt Backing for Taft.

If Mr. Longworth's speech reflects Col. Roosevelt's opinions to-day, the significance is simply that the ex-President is still of the opinion he is known to have expressed after the tariff fight and that he continues his approval of the work of his successor. It will be recalled that along in the Winter, when it was common talk that the President's leaning toward the regulars in the tariff struggle had opened a gulf between him and the hunter in Africa, letters from Col. Roosevelt were received in Washington by one high in the councils of the Government expressing his high approval of the course followed by Mr. Taft.

On the almost inevitable assumption that Mr. Longworth was speaking by the book, it is only necessary to quote a paragraph from his speech to show how powerful is the backing the President will have from the very quarter whence the insurgents have been most hopeful of justification for the course they have pursued in antagonism to the President. Mr. Longworth said:

> I am a Taft man—not on the surface, but through and through. I am not willing to use his name as a cloak for my support of other men and of other interests. I am not willing to praise him in public and work against him in private. I am with him not a part of the way but the whole way, and am sincere when I say that the success of his Administration is of far more importance to me that the success of my own individual campaign. If in order to be elected to Congress or any other office I had to repudiate the things he stands for, whether opposing him openly or damning him with faint praise, no office in this country would be good enough for me.

An interesting point in the speech and one not intended by Mr. Longworth came when he mentioned Mr. Pinchot's name in connection with the duty on lumber. The mere mention brought thunderous applause from part of the Republican audience, and Mr. Longworth had to suspend for a moment to allow the demonstration to subside.

Wickersham Causes Anger.

Only second in interest to the insurgents and politicians generally were the speeches of the Attorney General at Chicago and of the President here at the same meeting addressed by Mr. Longworth. Mr. Wickersham's unmistakable references to the "treason" of the insurgents has stirred up a hornet's nest at the Capitol. Bitter comment on that Cabinet officer is expected from the floor of the Senate.

While the impression is that the Attorney General's speech must have had the approval of the President, even if he did not actually read and modify the text of the address, the insurgents intend to point out clearly the difference in tone between his remarks belaboring the progressives as "traitors" and the President's speech, in which he assumed a rather conciliatory tone. It is true that the President intimated sharply that after the Administration bills were disposed of it might be well to see what could be done about straightening the affairs of the party. He also made it plain that his test of party loyalty was support of the Administration bills in substantially the form they were sent to Congress, but he expressly declared that he had no intention of reading the insurgents out of the party, leaving their expulsion to be the result of their own acts, if they so chose. Mr. Wickersham on the other hand hinted strongly that he thought it would be better for the party and more honest if the discontented radicals went over bodily to the Democrats instead of "coquetting" with them.

La Follette May Reply.

Senator La Follette has just about completed his speech against the Administration railroad bill, and it is likely that he will speak this week. No one would be surprised if he took occasion in his address to reply sharply to the taunts of the Attorney General. Mr. La Follette is of the opinion that many of the alleged "jokers" in the railroad bill were put there by Mr. Wickersham, as from his point of view the bill as finally sent to the Senate does not in all respects agree with the President's recommendations.

Representative E. H. Madison of Kansas, discussing the speech of the Attorney General, said to-night:

> "So far as I am informed no commission was issued by the Republican Party to the Attorney General to read out of the Republican Party men who exercise that freedom and action within the party that the President himself commended. The House insurgents have insisted that the President's legislation should be passed. Their fight on the rules simply sought to make possible the passage of legislation that the people want. If the Administration really wishes to accomplish results, the better way would be to quit lambasting the insurgents and turn attention to the men who are holding up the bills in committee. The insurgents notified the President six weeks ago that they are ready to vote for all the measures recommended by the President in his messages to Congress."

NO SPLIT, SAYS WICKERSHAM.

Thinks When Cabinet Has Explained the Party Will Unite.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Attorney General George W. Wickersham, just before he departed for Washington to-day, said he would convey to President Taft his belief that Republican insurgency in the Middle West would not split the party.

"While it is true that in Chicago I have been in the hands of friends, both of myself and the Administration," said Mr. Wickersham in the Union Railway Station, "still I have made some inquiries and observations as to the extent of what has been described as the insurgent movement. I was interested in securing this information because Washington is the poorest place in the world to get accurate, first-hand facts, especially as to the West, owing to the great number of cross currents, personal or selfish, in origin.

"While I have no disposition to deride or underestimate the strength and significance of the insurgent movement, still I am glad to tell President Taft good news. That is, I do not believe the Republican Party is to be split by the divergence over tariff or other policies. I further believe that the fullest, frankest discussions of Administration measures and results, such as will be voiced at length from now on, will result in a clarity of vision and a harmonizing of views that at present may not seem probable to the casual observer. Misunderstandings and lack of information are still prevalent. Party leaders will rectify this. Other members of the President's Cabinet than myself will make addresses presenting the facts directly to the people, and it is my prediction that the party will benefit and the insurgent sentiment will subside."

The Attorney General suggested a second term for Taft while he was discussing the time required to put the Administration 'policies' into the concrete form of laws, regulations, and judicial decisions.

"So much has been accomplished by the Administration in the period of President Taft's incumbency," he said, "that I believe the remainder of his term will suffice to accomplish most or most of what he has mapped out as desirable. There is the certainty, however, that before his term expires other questions of great importance, some of which I have in mind, will develop and will demand disposition. Under those circumstances there would or might arise the desirability of another term for the present Executive."

CENTRAL GRANTS INCREASES.

Telegraphers Get 10 Per Cent. Raise —Trainmen's Strike Vote In.

The railroad telegraphers of the entire New York Central system were elated yesterday over an agreement entered into late Saturday night between P. E. Crowley, Assistant General Manager of the New York Central Railroad, and M. G. Woolley, General Chairman of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, by which the men at the keys receive a salary increase of 10½ per cent. The signatures were affixed April 9, but the increase will be allowed from April 1. It is the largest increase ever granted to telegraphers.

A statement given out by the men to-night says that under the terms of the agreement, the Order of Railroad Telegraphers is now recognized as the official representative of the following employes: Any employe required to perform the duties of a telegrapher, and agents who are not required to telegraph as shown in wage schedule, signalman, leverman, and telephone operators connected with the movement of trains.

The increase amounts to about $200,000 a year.

Grand Master Garretson of the Order of Railroad Conductors and Grand Master Lee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen arrived in this city yesterday to go with the Grievance Committees of the trainmen and conductors to the officials of the New York Central Railroad to-day for a final conference over the demands of the trainmen and conductors. The vote on the question of a general strike has been counted, but it will not be announced until it is made known to the officials of the railroad.

The two Grand Chiefs went on record before they left the city last that nothing less than the wages granted by the Baltimore & Ohio will be accepted by the Central trainmen and conductors.

FEAR TROUBLE AT ROEBLING'S

6,000 Workers Out in Trenton—Union Leaders Block Peace Terms.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 10.—The 6,000 employes of the John A. Roebling's Sons Company, who went on strike several days ago after their demands for an increase in wages were refused, have been organized as union workers by National labor leaders from Washington for the work. It has been the boast of the Roebling Company for many years that labor troubles were unknown at the plant, and they have never before had a union to contend with. Serious trouble is feared here when the company is obliged by trade conditions to reopen the works. At the present time there is sufficient stock on hand to meet orders for several weeks, and the concern feels it can shut down the works in safety.

Charles F. Roebling, in charge of the manufacturing department of the big plant, told the men that they could have an increase from $1.35 to $1.42 a day to begin at once, and that the amount would be increased to $1.50 a day as soon as trade conditions warranted. The men at first were for accepting this offer and returning to work, but the labor union organizers got in their work and they stayed out.

TO VETO ANTI-NEGRO BILL.

Gov. Crothers of Maryland Refuses to Sanction Disfranchisement.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 10.—To the great surprise of W. Mitchell Digges, the author, and the Democratic machine supporters of the bill to deprive the negroes of the right to register at city and State elections Gov. Crothers has decided to withhold his approval from that bill, and also the one transferring May elections in Baltimore City to November. He will approve the Digges amendment to the Constitution to be submitted to the people next year, under which, if approved, negroes will not be permitted to vote unless they own property assessed at $500. The amendment commits the State to a uniform ballot, and abolishes the Wilson trick ballot in the black belt counties.

The so-called Digges bills sought to accomplish by a direct route what the disfranchising amendments of the past have aimed at more circumspectly. By denying point blank the right of the negro to register it challenged the fifteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution. The amendments, defeated by the people at past elections, sought simply to evade the strict interpretation of the amendment.

COLLEGE GIRL TO RAISE TRUCK

Miss M. Snyder, Wellesley Senior, Is Looking for a Farm on Long Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLESLEY, Mass., April 10.—Miss Marjory Snyder of the graduating class of Wellesley College has decided to become a farmer. She is now negotiating for the purchase of a large estate near Long Island City, where she will raise garden truck, flowers, fowls, and other domestic animals.

Miss Snyder does not think her choice of an occupation strange, and is inclined to chide those who laugh at her ambitions. Miss Snyder is wealthy in her own right, and will not lack for capital to make her undertaking a success.

in Prince George County, where he loved nothing better than to look over his live stock and plan for the coming crops. Mr. Woodward was always proud of his native State, and derived great pleasure from dilating to his friends on the beauties of Maryland and his life there on the farm.

Mr. Woodward's circle of friends was large and his friendships were lasting and strong. He never married. His nephew, William Woodward, a son of the late William Woodward, Jr., was his mainstay in the last few months of his life. William Woodward was on the Directorate of the Hanover National with his uncle and was with him constantly in his last illness.

In his later years Mr. Woodward contributed extensively to charitable institutions. He was a trustee not only of the New York Hospital, but also of St. John's College, Annapolis. The handsome library and physical laboratory building there called Woodward Hall was given to the college by Mr. Woodward. He also gave a new athletic field a few years ago. In June of last year the college conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws on Mr. Woodward. Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme Court presenting the certificate.

Mr. Woodward was a member of the Society of Colonial Wars and took an active interest in that organization. He was also a vestryman in St. Thomas's Church.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in St. Thomas's Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street. The burial will be in Woodlawn.

ROOSEVELT MADE A CITIZEN IN ITALY

After the Storm in Rome He Is the Hero of a Flower Festival at Porto Maurizio.

STREET NAMED FOR HIM

He Breaks the Floral Chain That Bars It, and Utters Vivas in Italian—Pinchot There with Documents.

PORTO MAURIZIO, April 10.—This little Italian city, all abloom with flowers, made Theodore Roosevelt an honorary citizen to-day and named a fine new street after him. With its 6,000 inhabitants arrayed in holiday garb, with a regiment of infantry in striking uniforms, with school children in white and blue waving American and Italian flags or strewing flowers before the ex-President and his wife, with all the municipal dignitaries bowing to the ground, Porto Maurizio took its distinguished American visitor to its heart and made much of him.

Never was such another day in the history of the town. There have been many prominent Italians and foreigners here, and celebrations have been held in their honor, but, to quote Mayor Carretti and ex-Mayor Olivero, those celebrations bear no comparison to that which occurred to-day.

"We welcome him as the first citizen of your great country," they said, "but above all we welcome him as a great humanitarian. We remember all he has done for Italians in America. We recall with gratitude what he did for Italy during the terrible Messina earthquake, and, remembering these things, we honor ourselves in doing all we can to testify to the world our deep satisfaction in having him as our guest and enrolling him among our citizens."

Chorus of the Play Assembles.

It was the day of days for a celebration. The sky was of deep azure, blending almost imperceptibly with the sea, and the town appeared to rise out of the ocean, covering the hills with its Moorish-looking buildings, over which floated gaily American and Italian flags side by side. Hardly a house had an occupant at 4 o'clock. All had gathered by that time in front of the Riviera Palace Hotel, which fronts on the driveway selected for the honor of bearing the Roosevelt name.

When I looked out of my window just before the hour fixed for the celebration I saw a mass of humanity packed in front of the hotel lining the terraces cut deep in the mountain side. The conventional garb of the men was relieved by the brilliant and picturesque gowns of the women, many of whom held parasols of varied hues over their heads to protect themselves from the dazzling rays of the sun. Along the road by which Mr. Roosevelt was expected to approach was stationed the Forty-first Regiment of infantry, the men in dress uniforms and the officers ablaze with decorations. Boys from the local college in dark blue uniforms stood at attention on one side of the road leading from the hotel, and on the other side younger children, boys and girls alternating, the former in white blouses and knickerbockers relieved by a light blue sash, and the latter in white blouses, dark blue skirts, and white kid shoes. Upon a terrace was stationed a military band.

Mr. Roosevelt Makes His Entry.

The appearance of Mr. Roosevelt was the signal for an outburst of cheers which seemed almost to rend the throats of the enthusiastic spectators, and the band immediately struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner." Huge bunches of roses were thrown into the landau where sat Mr. Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Carow, who is Mrs. Roosevelt's sister, and Mayor Carretti. As the ex-President descended from the carriage young girls threw flowers in his path. Mr. Roosevelt was presented by the Mayor to the Councilors of the town, after which he watched the removal of a white cloth from a sign on which was painted "Viale Teodoro Roosevelt," with the date.

To complete the ceremony Mr. Roosevelt broke a rope of flowers which was stretched across the driveway. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt then slowly mounted the road to the hotel, passing over a huge bank of daisies rustling in the light breeze. The hotel, which was decorated with American and Italian flags, threw wide hospitable doors for its distinguished guests and the crowd of Italians who followed behind. The Mayor delivered a speech in which he expressed the great gratification of all the people of Maurizio in having Mr. Roosevelt among them. He spoke of the ex-President as a champion of the world's peace, and then, with his face alight with pride, handed him a silver box tied with the Italian colors and containing the parchment which conferred the freedom of the city. Mr. Roosevelt understood enough Italian to gather the substance of what was said. He declared the words he heard were complimentary to himself and made him feel both proud and humble.

Miss Carow Takes Speaking Part.

The ex-President, however, was not equal to the task of replying in the language of his hosts. Turning to the Mayor, he asked him to translate his address to the people. Signor Carretti, who speaks fairly good English, replied that he would be glad to do so if Mr. Roosevelt would speak slowly. Mr. Roosevelt proceeded accordingly. He said that he was especially touched by the Mayor's suggestion that he had promoted peace in the world. When the Mayor stumbled somewhat in his translation Miss Carow repeated Mr. Roosevelt's expression more exactly in Italian. At this the crowd cheered delightedly.

"I feel," continued Mr. Roosevelt, "that the nations should act toward each other as honest men toward fellow-men, and that the same laws of morality and property should apply among nations as among men in their dealings with each other."

This sententious remark reduced the Mayor to despair, but Miss Carow valiantly stepped into the breach a second time and translated for him. Mr. Roosevelt said that he would always remember how the citizens of this beautiful city had received him, adding in Italian vivas for Porto Maurizio, for Mayor Carretti, and finally, with a droll look at his sister-in-law, for Miss Carow. These bits of Italian were received with roars of applause.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Afterward tea was served, Mrs. Roosevelt sitting in a chair banked with flowers, with the Mayor on her right and an Italian Senator on her left, Mr. Roosevelt with the English wife of the Mayor on his right. As he was leaving the room the ex-President stopped for a few moments at a table where the Italian officers were sitting and expressed his pleasure at their presence. As he left the room a small crowd of Americans began to sing "For he's a jolly good fellow." Mr. Roosevelt smiled in response and gave his especial thanks to the "glee club." As he was driven from the hotel the crowd gave a "Hip, hip, hurrah!" and the band speeded the departing guest with the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Mr. Roosevelt spent the morning dictating letters under a spreading tree in front of the villa he is occupying. The villa, by the way, is not Miss Carow's, as has been understood, but belongs to a friend of hers. It is charmingly situated in the midst of terraces banked with vari-colored flowers over which, as the ex-President worked, fluttered butterflies and bees, the latter humming away as they applied themselves to their own task of honey gathering. Through the trees could be seen the blue sea, while by looking up one saw perched on a projecting mountain crag a monastery appearing almost dead white in the brilliant sunshine. Over all spread a mantle of calm, peculiarly acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt and his family after the stormy period through which they passed in Rome.

To-night the Roosevelt family and Miss Carow were guests of the Mayor at dinner. Mr. Roosevelt has continued to receive cablegrams from Catholic priests in America expressing their approbation of his "manly stand" in connection with the Vatican incident.

Gifford Pinchot arrived late to-night. He will see Mr. Roosevelt in the morning and will present his views on the conservation situation.

"I have nothing to say at all, and I won't speak after I have seen the ex-President," he declared to those who questioned him. However, Mr. Pinchot has fortified himself with documents and evidently intends to make as strong a case as possible.

OWES VATICAN GRATITUDE.

Roosevelt Quoted as Saying Incident Gave Him Great Opportunity.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 10.—The Rome correspondent of The London Standard quotes Mr. Roosevelt as saying to him with reference to the Vatican incident:

"I should be grateful for what has happened, since it brings out with vigor and energy undeniable evidence of the correctness of my affirmations on the liberty of faith. Whatever I have said might without this incident have remained inefficacious, and would certainly have been colorless and weak, while now facts have proved stronger than any words I could have uttered.

"Perhaps, however, the fact that they gave me such an opportunity does not go to prove that diplomacy is the strong point of those to whom I owe it."

FOGAZZARO HIS GUEST.

Author Whose Book Was Condemned by Vatican Lunches with Roosevelt.

PORTO MAURIZIO, April 10.—To-night the town breakwater is illuminated with Venetian lanterns, with a band playing in the public square and the residents continuing the celebration, which marks the most important day in the history of Porto Maurizio since Augustus marched through with his army on his way to Gaul.

The Mayor has cabled a message to President Taft, expressing the pride felt by the people at the presence of Mr. Roosevelt here, and at the same time transmitting the greetings of the municipality.

Mr. Roosevelt did not attend church this morning, and Antonio Fogazzaro, the Italian author, one of whose books created a great stir and was placed on the Index Expurgatorius by the Vatican, was his guest at luncheon. Mr. Roosevelt and Fogazzaro found much in common to discuss, especially the relation of morals to society and politics.

With the exception of Gifford Pinchot the former Chief Forester of the United States, who will visit him to-morrow, Mr. Roosevelt expects to receive no callers until he leaves for Venice on Wednesday, and hopes to enjoy a couple of days of complete rest. Neither Mrs. Roosevelt nor Miss Ethel Roosevelt will accompany him on his trip to Austria, but will remain here for several days, and will then go direct to Paris. It has been arranged to make a twelve-hour stop at Venice in order to give Kermit, who accompanies his father, an opportunity to see the famous city built on the sea.

PREPARATIONS AT BUDAPEST.

Hungarian Capital Will Be Ready for Roosevelt Next Sunday.

VIENNA, April 10.—Baron Hengelmüller von Hengervar, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States, who is now on leave, is busy at Budapest completing arrangements for the reception of ex-President Roosevelt at the Hungarian capital. Mr. Roosevelt will leave Vienna early next Sunday, and will visit Count Albert Apponyi, the former Minister of Worship, at Eberhard, arriving at Budapest the same night. Monday will be devoted to sightseeing in that city.

The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador will give a dinner in honor of the ex-President at the Park Club. On Tuesday Mr. Roosevelt will visit the famous State stables, afterward attending a dinner given by Count Kuen von Hedervary, the Premier.

$15,000,000 FOR HOSPITALITY.

London Expected to Spend That Much During Roosevelt's Visit.

LONDON, April 10.—The first state ball of the season at Buckingham Palace will take place at an earlier date than usual to enable invitations to be extended to Mr. Roosevelt and his family.

So many splendid entertainments are projected by American hostesses in honor of the Roosevelts that it is estimated that some $15,000,000 will be spent in London in that way during the week's visit of the family, and that the coming season will be one of the most brilliant on record.

TO DECORATE ROOSEVELT?

Belgium Wonders if He Ought to Have Order of Leopold.

BRUSSELS, April 10.—Extensive preparations are going on for a big welcome to Theodore Roosevelt in the Belgian capital.

There has been considerable discussion in certain quarters of the question whether it would be proper for the King to offer the ex-President the decoration of the Order of Leopold.

ROOSEVELT ALSO TO LECTURE.

Has Promised to Talk About Africa Before National Geographic Society.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Theodore Roosevelt has consented to lecture about his African travels and trophies before the National Geographic Society some time after he returns to this country. Whether it will be his first address on the subject is not known, as the date has not yet been fixed. His willingness to make his appearance under the auspices of the society has just been made known here.

After his return in the Roosevelt from the discovery of the north pole, Commander Peary delivered his initial lecture to the society, and Sir Ernest Shackleton's first address in America on his antarctic explorations was under the same auspices. It is thought probable, therefore, that Mr. Roosevelt will honor the society in a similar manner.

On March 14 the following cablegram was sent to him in Khartoum:

> National Geographic Society sends congratulations on extraordinary success and immense scientific value of your expedition. We rejoice at continued health of you and all your party. We hope you will honor the society by addressing it at your convenience on your return.

On the following day Mr. Roosevelt sent the following letter through Lawrence F. Abbott of New York:

> Mr. Roosevelt asks me to express to you his hearty thanks for your cablegram. He will gladly address the society, but must await his return to America before he can make a definite appointment.

Thus the matter stands at present, and the society awaits the conclusion of the ex-President's European tour.

TWO KILLED IN PHILADELPHIA.

Four Hip Sing Men Shot and a Third Is Expected to Die.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—Two Chinamen were shot and killed and several persons were injured by wild shots and by being trampled in a stampede to-night in Race and Cherry Streets, between Ninth and Tenth, Philadelphia's Chinatown.

One of the shootings happened at 913 Race Street, on the third floor kitchen of a restaurant, and the other at 927 Cherry Street, in the grocery of On San Wo. Both occurred at practically the same time.

Shortly before midnight a Chinaman walked into 913 Race Street, and, proceeding to the kitchen, opened fire upon the cook. There were several shots and the man dropped. The restaurant, on the second floor, was crowded, and there was an immediate flight toward the narrow exits. Habitues of 911 also poured into the place as the only exit to the street. In this crush several persons were injured.

Two Chinamen, both in American clothes, walked into the grocery in Cherry Street and with a polite bow presented a letter. As the man to whom it was handed began to read the strangers began firing, and the receiver of the note, Chu Nong, fell with several bullets in his body and died. This place, too, was filled with men, and there ensued a wild rush to the door. The strangers kept on firing.

Jung Tong, a partner of the grocery proprietor, closed with one of the men, only to receive two shots from behind. Then the assailants ran into the street, with Jung Tong in pursuit. He fell at Cherry and Hutchinson Streets, and was taken to a hospital. He is not expected to live. Hoy Nung was badly wounded in the arm.

The shooters are said to belong to the On Leong Tong, and those attacked to the Hip Sing Tong.

As soon as the shooting became known the police officials roped off Race Street, between Ninth and Tenth Streets, and started in to round up all suspicious characters or Chinamen not known in the vicinity.

Forty-two of them were caught in the dragnet. But it is not yet known whether the murderer of Nung is among the number.

Chinatown is completely surrounded by policemen to-night, and if the criminals have not already got beyond the police lines they stand little chance of escaping.

UPPER BERTHS TO BE THE CHEAPER ONES

Commerce Commission Orders Pullman Company to Make a Differential on Its Cars.

RATES TO PACIFIC REDUCED

Investigation Shows $60,000,000 Regular Dividends and $95,000,000 Divisions of Surplus in Eleven Years.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission, in a decision to-day, holds it to be "unjust and unreasonable" for the Pullman Company to charge equally for the upper and lower berths in its sleeping cars. Differential charges are commanded in several instances, and Pullman rates from Chicago to the Pacific are ordered reduced.

The commission ruled that the present Pullman rate of $12 from St. Paul to the Pacific Coast was too high, and ordered it reduced to $10. The present rate of $12 for an upper berth is ordered reduced to $8.50.

A short night's journey, the commission holds, should not carry a rate of more than $1.50 for a lower berth and $1.10 for an upper. The rate of $2, which the company has maintained from St. Paul to Fargo, N. D., 242 miles, is ordered reduced accordingly.

The prevailing upper berth rate of $1.50 is reduced to $1.10 between St. Paul and Superior, Wis., and the upper berth rate between St. Paul and Grand Forks is reduced from $2 to $1.50. The rates prevailing are approved for lower berths.

The investigation of the sleeping car company's contracts, general system of charges, and earnings revealed annual dividends of nearly $60,000,000 from 1899 to 1908, inclusive.

It also showed that the amount carried to surplus annually did not fall far short of the annual dividends of 8 per cent.; that in 1898 a cash dividend of $7,200,000 was paid out of accumulated surplus; in 1899 a special stock dividend of 50 per cent., amounting to $18,000,000, was declared, and in 1907 another of 36 per cent., amounting to $26,015,256, was divided. During a period of eleven years $51,600,000 in special cash and stock dividends were paid, in addition to the annual ones.

In 1898 the stock of the company was increased from $36,000,000 to $100,000,000, of which $20,000,000 is accounted for by the acquisition of the Wagner Palace Car Company. The remainder of the increase, $44,000,000, represents capitalization of surplus. The record shows that no additional capital was put in.

ACTED THE EXPLANATION.

But a 12-Year Amateur Burglar Could Not Bark Like a Great Dane.

It is one thing to be a skilled burglar after reading in the novels how it is done; it is another thing to bark like a Great Dane just because one's young accomplice makes an explanation to a suspicious policeman that seems to require vasty barking. A 12-year-old boy cannot bark like a Great Dane, no matter what his zeal may be. As witness this incident:

John C. Klose has a butcher's shop at 3,494 Broadway, near 143d Street. Its outside door is just inside a vestibule that leads upstairs. It was quiet in that neighborhood last night at 10 o'clock, and Policeman Kelly, seeing 13-year-old Julius Romanoff of 496 West 136th Street standing inside the vestibule, asked him what he was doing there. Kelly did not notice that the fanlight above the door was open.

"Oh, I'm teasing the dog inside," explained the guileful Romanoff easily, speaking in a loud voice. "You know the butcher has a Great Dane in there. I knock on the window just to hear him bark."

Thinking that explanation rang with the gold of childhood innocence, Kelly started away. Just then he heard a hideous imitation of a Great Dane barking come over the fanlight.

Seizing Romanoff by the scruff of the neck, Kelly turned him over to a citizen who happened to be passing. He then climbed over the fanlight, and after a long hunt found little Harry Kennedy, 12 years old, of 1,636 Amsterdam Avenue, squeezed under a safe. Here was the Great Dane, who had heard his accomplice's explanation over the fanlight, and tried to live up to the story.

In the West 125th Street Police Station, where the two boys were charged with being juvenile delinquents, the wily Romanoff was ready with a story to the effect that a big boy had set him and Harry up to attempting the burglary at the butcher's shop. The boy had told them that if they found any money in the place he would tell them what they could do with it, said Julius Romanoff, as if he didn't know what to do with money without special instructions from age.

On his person were found fourteen cakes of chocolate, some of which evidently came from a nearby store. The police are waiting for other complaints.

The two boys were turned over to the Gerry Society.

Children Give $4,894 for Mission.

Twenty-five hundred children filled Zion and St. Timothy Episcopal Church, in Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday afternoon, and presented $4,894 for world missions. The occasion was the annual meeting of representatives of Sunday schools of Manhattan to listen to a missionary address, and turn in money given by them in Lent. The speaker was the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks.

SUSPENDS POLICEMAN AFTER STREET BRAWL

Commissioner Baker Also Orders McNichol Arrested — Citizen Says He Assaulted Him.

HE SAYS HE WAS ATTACKED

McNichol Arrested Grogan, Who Made Counter Charges—Magistrate Holds the Latter to Investigate Further.

Conflicting stories were told of a street brawl early yesterday morning which led to the arrest, on a charge of assault, of Patrolman Daniel J. McNichol of Police Traffic Squad D, in Brooklyn, and his suspension from duty by order of Police Commissioner Baker. James Walsh of 25 Cheever Place, Brooklyn, was the complainant against McNichol, and the counter charges puzzled Magistrate Nash, who heard them in the Myrtle Avenue Court.

The trouble occurred at about 1 o'clock yesterday morning at Atlantic and Flatbush Avenues. McNichol was off duty and in "plain clothes" at the time. According to the story told by him, he was walking in Atlantic Avenue with his brother-in-law, Arthur O'Leary, a pressman. Both live at 12 Prospect Place. At Flatbush Avenue, they were passing a group of men, he alleged, when Philip Grogan of 657 Henry Street, stepped out and attacked McNichol. McNichol said that the other men gathered around him threateningly. He drew his policemen's whistle and blew it, the men scattering. McNichol seized Grogan and arrested him, taking him to the Bergen Street station.

Attracted to the scene by the shooting, Patrolman Naekel of the Bergen Street Station arrested O'Leary for disorderly conduct. Reserves from the station rounded up several other men supposed to have been concerned in the affair.

At the station Grogan complained that McNichol had assaulted him, kicking him in the body. Grogan and O'Leary were locked up, and McNichol was detained at the station by Capt. Hayes pending an investigation. Capt. Hayes informed Inspector Boettler, in command of the traffic police, of McNichol's connection with the trouble and the Inspector started an inquiry.

When Grogan and O'Leary were taken before Magistrate Nash later, James Walsh, who had been with Grogan, made a complaint of assault against McNichol. The stories told by the persons involved were so conflicting that the Magistrate was puzzled over the affair. There was much talk of revolver shots having been fired in the trouble. Walsh alleged that O'Leary had a revolver, and that it was displayed, but Capt. Hayes said that he searched the man and failed to find a pistol. Neither could he find any revolver at the scene of the trouble.

Magistrate Nash, referring to the complaint against McNichol, directed Walsh and his witnesses to appear before Magistrate Naumer this morning, when there will be a stenographer in court to take their testimony. He held Grogan in $500 bail, on a charge of assault, for examination to-morrow. O'Leary was discharged.

When the matter was reported to Commissioner Baker he ordered that Policeman McNichol be suspended from duty and placed under arrest on a charge of assault, pending investigation. McNichol was placed on parole with his commanding officer, Acting Captain Grossbeck.

$20,000 FOR A NATIVE PEARL.

One Weighing 187 Grains Found in White River, Ark.—Now Here.

An American pearl weighing 187 grains has arrived in the Maiden Lane district from the Western fisheries. It is as round as a marble and is said by New York dealers to be the largest perfect fresh water pearl ever seen in this city. The gem is a beautiful pink in color, and is valued at $20,000 by the dealer who purchased it. The merchant explained yesterday that it was found by a "pearler" a short time ago in the White River, in Arkansas, and sold to a Western dealer, who brought it here.

A Western dealer, who was in town yesterday, said that, because of the decrease in the supply of American pearls, the prices will be higher this year. The value of the mussel shells has also advanced of late, and they now command about $24 a ton.

GRADY ANNOUNCES HE'LL QUIT SENATE

Declares He Really Means It Because He Is to Be Head of the Eagles.

HE RETIRED ONCE BEFORE

Cleveland Asked Kelly to Keep Him Home—Helped Raines to Form Bi-Partisan Machine.

ALBANY, April 10.—Senator Thomas F. Grady of New York, the veteran legislator and leader of the minority in the Senate, announced to-night that he intended to retire this year from public life. Senator Grady announced in other years his intention of retiring from the Senate, but it was understood then that he probably would be a candidate for Congressman.

"After next August," said Senator Grady to-night, "there isn't the possibility of a contingency that I shall be in public life. Last year I was elected Vice President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. That carries with it the succession to the Presidency of the order at a very handsome salary, with obligation to service to 300,000 men. You will recognize that I have taken an obligation I will not break in any case. There isn't a possibility of my remaining in public life."

Thomas Francis Grady has for years been one of Tammany Hall's principal orators, and is one of the picturesque figures in that organization. No Tammany Hall ratification is complete without him, and the organization has no speaker who can command greater attention from the braves than the "silver tongued Grady." They will regret his retirement, but he will still be among them as the head of the Order of Eagles, of which his intimate friend and colleague, Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan, is one of the most prominent members.

Mr. Grady recently stated in a facetious outburst at the Amen Corner dinner that his career began when the times were good, and was ending when the reverse was the case. He said he was mighty glad that conditions were different when he started from what they are now, because he might not have had the good time that he assured his hearers had been his lot.

"Tom" Grady was born in the old Fourth Ward, and was educated in Roman Catholic parish schools and the Manhattan College. Even as a college student he was known as "silver-tongued" Grady, and to this day his college mates refer to a speech delivered years ago before the Total Abstinence Society of St. James's Parish. His associates then believed that, like his brother, he was destined for the priesthood.

Mr. Grady earned his first wage as a copy carrier for the publishing house of D. Appleton & Co. He soon turned to politics, and in 1876 became a member of the Assembly, being the youngest man in that body. In a sketch written in that year he was spoken of as an "extremely prepossessing" young man and as "one of the very few men to whom nature had imparted the rarest of all gifts—oratory."

In 1882 Mr. Grady went to the Senate, of which body he has been a member ever since, with the exception of six years. Grover Cleveland, then Governor of New York, in 1883 wrote to John Kelly, the leader of Tammany Hall, as follows:

Executive Chamber,
Albany, Oct. 20, 1883.

Hon. John Kelly:

Dear Sir. It is not without hesitation that I write this. I have determined to do so, however, because I see no reason why I should not be entirely frank with you. I am anxious that Mr. Grady should not be returned to the next Senate. I do not wish to conceal the fact that my personal comfort and satisfaction are involved in this matter, but I know that good legislation, based upon a pure desire to promote the interests of the people, and the improvement of legislative methods, are also deeply involved. I forbear to write in detail of the other considerations having relation to the welfare of the party and the approval to be secured by a change for the better in the character of its representatives. These things will occur to you without suggestion from me. Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Mr. Kelly kept Mr. Grady at home, much to his chagrin, and as a result he became one of Mr. Cleveland's bitterest foes. It was partly in relation to Mr. Grady that Gen. Bragg made his famous remark in nominating Mr. Cleveland in 1884. Gen. Bragg said of Cleveland, "We love him for the enemies he has made."

Mr. Grady went back to the Senate in 1889, and he has been there ever since. Four years ago Thomas Rock made a spectacular campaign against him, but Mr. Grady triumphed with his usual big plurality. Many times in recent years notices of his retirement have been given out.

In recent years Grady has been one of the leaders in the Senate. He was one of the strongest opponents of Gov. Hughes's Anti-Race Track bills. He and John Raines made the bi-partisan compact which held up other Hughes reform measures and controlled much legislation. He is also numbered among the few who voted to dismiss the charges against Jotham P. Allds.

Two years ago Mr. Grady gained a lot of undesired notoriety as a result of a raid made upon "Bob" Davis's poolroom clearing house in Fulton Street. A deposit slip found in Davis's safe showed that somebody connected with the clearing house had deposited or prepared to deposit $500 to Senator Grady's credit in the Windsor Trust Company. It was in connection with the disclosures following this raid that the story got out about the alleged betting of $200 by Senator Grady on Azelina in the fifth race. For months following this Mr. Grady when cartooned was always astride Azelina.

Senator Grady's name was mentioned a few days ago in the Fire Insurance investigation, when Mr. Hitchcock of the State Insurance Department tried to link his name with Legislative favors the fire insurance companies had received.

RADICAL 'SLIPPER KING' HERE

Sir Henry Tricket, a Free Trader, for Mending the Lords—Sees War Coming.

Sir Henry W. and Lady Tricket arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Baltic. Sir Henry, who is known as the "Slipper King" in England, is head of a great manufacturing plant at Waterfoot, near Manchester. One reason for his coming here at this time, he said, is to adjust differences with the Customs Department over the duties on the slippers he sends to this country. They are assessed as manufactured articles, and he contends that as leather is 52 per cent. of the slippers, they should come in as leather goods.

"I am a free trader," said Sir Henry. "The Englishman who talks of a protective tariff has never traveled. England has only one asset, and that is coal. We speak of England getting the trade of the Colonies. Well, we pay for that trade. The United States ought to have the trade of the British West Indies. She is much nearer to them than we are."

Sir Henry, although he has three times refused to be a candidate for Parliament, is active in politics. Speaking of British conditions, he said:

"Though some may express unbelief, I am sure that there will be war between England and Germany. The Kaiser is remarkably clever. They are not letting everyone know what they are doing, but it is not denied that preparations for war are going on. The trouble is going to come in the North Sea. England must have a navy to protect the island. Australia and New Zealand are each to contribute a warship, and Canada is doing something toward a navy, but that is only a small part of what is being done. Our navy budget this year is $120,000,000. But England is facing a great crisis, and she can afford it.

"The budget is most just and fair. We are going to collect the tax on land values. Lloyd George had the nerve to tackle what no one else had courage to do. A revolution is going on in England, and in spite of opposition it will continue to go on. We are going to get money from the land. The big land owners have paid little, but under this budget 10 per cent. of land values will go to the Government, and 10 per cent. to the corporation.

"There will probably be an election in May. We want to squash the House of Lords. I do not mean by that that they will be abolished. We want a second chamber, but why have a body which defeats the will of the party which was put into power by the votes of the people?"

BILL TO LIMIT TENEMENTS.

Conference Called to Discuss Regulation of Height and Area.

The advisability of having an unpaid commission on the prevention of congestion in this city and of a law to limit the height of tenements and the area to be covered by such buildings will be discussed at a special conference to be held on next Friday, April 15.

The proposed commission has been indorsed by the Real Estate Exchange of Long Island, which will participate in the conference, but no action has been taken on the proposed bill limiting the height of buildings.

This is if special interest to Queens and other suburban districts. Outside of Long Island City in Queens and Richmond no building may be erected occupying more than 70 per cent. of a corner lot or 60 per cent. of any other lot, nor exceed in height the width of the street, with a maximum of 35 feet, if this bill becomes a law.

In Brooklyn and the Bronx the limitations would vary. In the Thirtieth Ward, soon to be served by the Fourth Avenue Subway, no building shall occupy more than 80 per cent. of a corner lot, or 60 per cent. of any other lot, nor exceed in height the width of the street, with a maximum of 45 feet.

SHIPMAN GETS $5,000 BAIL.

Real Estate Man Silent on Stenographer's Charge—Another Girl Rescued.

Joseph P. Shipman, the real estate operator, with offices at 95 Liberty Street, who was arrested on Saturday by Police Capt. Gallagher, on complaint of Miss Emily Richie, a Brooklyn stenographer, charged with attempted assault, was arraigned in the Tombs Police Court yesterday. Detective Quinn, who also took part in making the arrest, was in court and made a short affidavit on which Magistrate Barlow held Shipman for examination this morning, when Assistant District Attorney James O'Malley will be in court. Shipman, who had spent the night in the Leonard Street station, was released on $5,000 bail. Joseph L. Kennedy, an engineer, was bondsman. He gave as security his residence at 160 West 144th Street. Shipman was silent on the girl's charge.

Michael Greenberg and his wife, Mollie, of 35 Allen Street, were arraigned before Magistrate Appleton in the Essex Market Court, and held in $3,000 bail each for examination Tuesday on a charge of abduction. It is alleged that the prisoners abducted Rose Levy, 16 years old, a daughter of Joseph Levy, a truck driver, of 74 Forsyth Street. It is not alleged that the girl was held against her will, but the charge of abduction was made because she is under 18 years of age.

CHANTECLER JEWELRY NOW.

Barnyard Novelties on Sale Here—Manufacturers Rushed with Orders.

Chantecler jewelry has appeared in Maiden Lane, and several manufacturers have their shops going night and day to fill orders. The manufacturers are of the opinion that the full force of the fad will not be felt until the next holiday season, and they are now making up large quantities of the jewelry, in anticipation of big sales then.

Roosters, pheasants, peacocks, and other birds are made up in gold and silver or with a plating of the precious metal, for the chantecler jewelry. The birds are usually soldered to such ornaments as brooches, pendants, buckles, scarfpins, veil and hat pins, purses and mesh bags, and other articles. In most designs the birds come in the colors of the natural feathers, produced by the effect of acids and lacquers on the metal. With these aids the jewelers are imitating every known color of even the gayest peacock. In costly pieces diamonds are used for the eyes of the birds.

CROWD AT OPENING OF LABOR TEMPLE

Scheme of the Presbyterian Church to Reach the Workers Gives Promise of Success.

PROJECT IS NON-SECTARIAN

Secretary of the Federation of Labor Says It Will Be an Open Forum, Where Each May Speak His Mind.

The new Labor Temple, at Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue, of the Department of Church and Labor of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions was opened yesterday afternoon by a meeting at which Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was the principal speaker.

The building formerly was known as the Fourteenth Street Presbyterian Church.

Five hundred persons were present when the meeting opened yesterday, including members of labor unions, Socialist, Anarchists, and persons who who take an interest in labor matters and sociologists. The Rev. Charles L. Stelzle, Superintendent of the Department of Church and Labor, who some time ago started a temperance society of walking delegates and other officers of unions, presided. He said:

"I addressed the Bartenders' Union some time ago and found that its meetings were always opened with prayer. As far as I know this was the only union that had a chaplain, and that so opened its meetings.

"We are not attempting to drive workingmen into the church, nor are we trying to start a church organization until it is asked for. We purpose forming the Temple Brotherhood as an entirely unsectarian institution, to meet every Sunday afternoon. Jews, Catholics, and Protestants will be equally welcome."

A questioner demanded to know if the meetings were to be anti-Socialistic. He answered:

"Not at all. We have invited a leading Socialist to talk on Socialism. We are going to give the Socialists a fair chance, and they are going to give us a chance to get at them."

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was introduced, and said:

"This brotherhood, as I understand it, is to be an open forum, where every man, if he have a message, may give it expression, and if it be good it will receive attention."

Meetings of the new organization will be held every Sunday afternoon.

JAPANESE BUTLER ARRESTED.

Mrs. Golding Says She Found Him Prowling in Her Room.

Mrs. Mabel C. Golding, who occupies an apartment with her three sons at the Berriford, 49 Clermont Avenue, appeared in the Harlem Court yesterday to press a complaint of disorderly conduct against her Japanese butler, Hosaka Fruga.

Mrs. Golding said she was awakened early yesterday morning by a feeling of suffocation, and saw a man crouching on the floor of her room. Thinking it was her fifteen-year-old son, John, she called to him, whereupon the man darted for the door. She called for her son, Robert, but as the man ran out, Mrs. Golding says, she recognized Fruga.

Robert went to his mother's assistance, and when he heard her story he went after the Jap. In the meantime Mrs. Golding called Policeman White of the West 125th Street Station, who placed the butler under arrest. He was held for trial in $500 bail.

THE NORTH DAKOTA READY.

Our Large Battleship Arrives at Boston to Go Into Commission.

BOSTON, April 10.—With her war paint on and all her guns in place the new battleship North Dakota steamed into the Charlestown Navy Yard to-day ready to go into commission. She came from the builders' yard in Quincy under command of Capt. "Ned" Evans of Portsmouth, N. H.

The North Dakota is the second of the two battleships of the Dreadnought type to be completed. Her sister ship, the Delaware, is now at Norfolk. The North Dakota successfully passed all her trials, and was accepted by the Government some time ago.

The scout cruiser Salem also arrived at the navy yard to-day.

LANSDEN ELECTRIC WAGONS

FOR SIX YEARS Lansden Electric Wagons, equipped with the Edison Storage Battery, have been quietly working wonders in the delivery service of Greater New York. Unadvertised during this period, save by actual demonstrations of business routine, every car that could be turned out by the factory has been sold.

NOW THAT WE CAN furnish the perfected Edison Battery and our facilities for manufacturing have been increased, making a larger output possible, we believe it is time to tell our story to the public—to tell why some of the greatest establishments in the Metropolis, to whom efficiency, economy and durability mean a yearly saving of thousands, have selected the Lansden with the Edison Battery over all other makes.

The story will begin in our next announcement.

MIDNIGHT CLOSING OF SALOONS SOUGHT

Excise Commissioner Clement Also Recommends Local Option in the Residential Districts.

CRITICISM OF THE POLICE

Says Demand for State Enforcement of Law Is Due to Their Neglect —Citizens Too Indifferent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—Local option in a "workable" form for residential sections of cities and a shortening of the time during which saloons may be open are recommended by Maynard N. Clement, State Excise Commissioner, in his annual report which will be submitted to the Legislature to-morrow night. Mr. Clement also writes a defense of the Raines law and asks if the clamor for State enforcement of the Liquor Tax law is a confession that home rule is a failure.

Mr. Clement would have a law to compel saloons in cities of the first and second class to close from midnight until 6 o'clock A. M.; in cities of the third class and large villages from 11 P. M. to 6 A. M., and in smaller villages from 10 P. M. to 6 A. M. Under the present law saloons may open at 5 A. M. and continue business until 1 the next morning, except on Saturdays, when business must cease at midnight. The Commissioner believes the shorter hours would accomplish excise reform which would be more effective than the extension of local option to the cities.

It is shown that there are 27,692 liquor licenses in force in the State, or one for each 291 inhabitants. Liquor dealers have gone on record during the last year in favor of limiting the number of liquor places to one for every 500 inhabitants, while disinterested persons say the ratio should be one saloon to every 750 or 1,000 inhabitants. Mr. Clement does not favor drastic changes in the law in this respect, but believes the issuance of licenses for new places should be restricted. He recommends that any increase in the number of licensed places existing on Jan. 1, 1910, be prohibited by law, that hereafter no rebates be given on surrendered certificates, and that the provision of law allowing the transfer of a license from one person to another be repealed. The Commissioner says:

> While such changes in the law would tend to a gradual improvement, I believe that a more marked reduction in the number of licensed liquor dealers would be hastened by an amendment to the law which would extend the consent area, and thus provide a scheme of local option for cities that would be practicable, workable, and obtainable. I recommend a change in the law which would extend from 200 to, say, 300 feet, the radius in residential territory for which the consents of the owners of not less than two-thirds of the dwellings should be filed upon application for a liquor tax certificate.
>
> This would give the two-thirds majority of residence owners within a circle of 600 feet the right to determine, whether a licensed place should continue or not. Such voters would be able to exercise their option from positive personal knowledge of the character of every place affected by the determination to give or to withhold consents. It would give the home owners in all the residential sections of the State the exercise of an improved local option, and by it a control over places to say whether they should be continued or not, that would be most wholesome and beneficial.

Mr. Clement declares that excise reform is hindered more by demagogues than by defects in the liquor tax law. He adds:

> The Raines law hotel, so-called, has become responsible in the minds of many for every disorderly house, in spite of the fact that there is far less of the social evil flaunting itself in the eyes of decency than when the law was passed, and in spite of the fact that the ten-room provision from which the Raines law hotel derives its name was taken almost word for word from the old excise law of 1892, and the decisions of the Supreme Court construing that act.
>
> Sensation-mongers and faddists have, through ignorance or a morbid desire for cheap notoriety, insulted the integrity and morality of the women of the cities and populous centres of the State without justification or decency. Our cities to-day compare favorably as to virtue and obedience to law with any others in the civilized world. That society is undergoing a moral uplift is in evidence on every hand. Standards are higher both in public and in private life than ever before. More is required of public servants, and better work is being done by them than at any previous time in the history of the State. This amendment of public sentiment will promote obedience to law in a greater degree than can possibly result from amendments of the statutes themselves.

Reference is made in the report of the Commissioner to the intention to reintroduce the Committee of Fourteen bill of last year, with the Sunday opening clause eliminated. The measure provides for an increase in the number of special State agents. Mr. Clement says:

> If by this proposed increase it is intended so to change the character and enlarge the scope of departmental supervision work as to constitute the special agent force practically a limited State constabulary having oversight and control over the liquor traffic alone, a serious question is presented involving a radical change in the policy of the State in the extension of State control in the place of local control or home rule, but limiting it in its application to the liquor traffic, which is only one of the several causes that contribute to disorder in the community.
>
> Are we prepared to concede that so far as local police supervision of the liquor traffic is concerned, home rule—so long highly cherished in declamation—is successful only in theory, and in practice a failure, because of the indifference of the people to an extent that justifies intervention by the State?
>
> The remedy is not to change the system, but to change the man higher up, who is responsible in nine cases out of ten for police demoralization. This can only be done by intelligent action on the part of the people who rule; it cannot be done by those who serve, nor by changing the law.
>
> There is altogether too much clamor for the correction by new laws of old evils that are wholly due to an indifferent discharge of the plain duty that our system of government devolves on citizens.

During the last fiscal year the total excise revenue collected by the State was $18,005,493, and about $400,000 was collected in penalties and criminal fines.

GETS HIS PRESENTS BACK.

But the Rejected Suitor Had to Call In a City Marshal.

Not satisfied with canceling love's young dream, Harry J. Fordberg of 113 West Eighty-ninth Street, Manhattan, wants his former sweetheart, Miss Florence L. Smith of 436 Third Avenue, Astoria, to return to him sundry presents, such as a diamond ring, a locket set with diamonds, a gold fleur-de-lis pin, a gold watch, and a set of furs. These were tokens of the esteem in which Fordberg held Miss Smith until they had a misunderstanding some time ago.

Miss Smith says she returned to Fordberg's mother several pieces of cut glass and $70 with which she had been intrusted to start housekeeping. As for the other trinkets, she believed that she was entitled to keep them until late Saturday night, when a City Marshal from Manhattan invaded her home and made a demand for the property. Fordberg had gone before the Magistrate in the First District Municipal Court, Manhattan, and sworn out a writ of replevin for the articles.

Miss Smith is a bookkeeper in a store in Astoria. Fordberg is a bookkeeper employed in Manhattan. On learning of the mission of the Marshal Miss Smith consulted with her employer, and finally decided to turn over the tokens of Fordberg's departed love. She says, however, she will get a lawyer to represent her in court when the case comes up for a hearing next Wednesday.

MIDSHIPMAN WILSON DYING.

Naval Academy Football Player Was Injured Last October.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 10.—The condition of Earl D. Wilson, the Naval Academy football player whose neck was fractured during a football game on Oct. 16 last, was such to-day that the gravest apprehension was felt. It is not thought that death can be delayed over a few days at most.

Wilson could not be moved at all during the day, and he has been unable to talk, though he seems to understand some of the things said to him, and can move his head in reply. This morning a decided loss of strength was noted, and this has continued during the day. With him are his father, West B. Wilson of Covington, Ky., and a brother. His mother is dead.

ADELPHI GIRL'S FUNERAL.

Her Classmates at Last Rites Over Miss Lustgarten, Who Died of Burns.

Among the several hundred mourners and friends at the funeral of Miss Susanne Scott Lustgarten, who died of burns received while participating in a "ghost dance" exhibition at the Adelphi College, Brooklyn, last Friday night, were more than fifty of the dead girl's classmates and President Charles H. Levermore and several of the Faculty. Rabbi A. H. Nieto of Arverne read the services at the home of the girl's parents in Trotting Horse Lane and Dry Harbor Road, Elmhurst, yesterday.

Miss Lustgarten was a graduate from the Newtown High School in the Class of 09, and District Supt. of Public Schools Cornelius E. Franklin and Prof. J. D. Billingham, Dr. Ezra Lehman, Dr. Albert A. Meras, and Miss Nellie Hewins of the Newtown High School were also present. Among the many floral tributes were one from Adelphi College and another from the Gamma Sigma Phi of the Newtown High School.

Miss Flora Cook, daughter of W. E. Cook, a lawyer of 648 Green Avenue, and Miss Gertrude Betchke, classmates of the dead girl, who went to her assistance and were severely burned, were also present. Miss Cook's hands were wrapped in bandages. Miss Lustgarten was an only child, and her parents are both prostrated.

WAR FLEET TO GO ON ANOTHER CRUISE

President Taft Is Planning a Naval Demonstration Similar to One Roosevelt Had.

MAY GO AROUND THE WORLD

Destination After Leaving the Mediterranean Is Unknown—Leave Hampton Roads in November.

Rear Admirals Richard Wainwright, Aid for Operations; Reginald F. Nicholson, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and William P. Potter, the Aid for Personnel, in the Navy Department at Washington, are at work mapping out another great cruise for the Atlantic Fleet. The plans are almost certain to be approved by the President and Secretary of the Navy. A voyage that will be the most important ever made by a fleet, with the exception of the around-the-world one made two years ago by the Atlantic Fleet, under the command of Admirals Evans and Sperry, is contemplated.

As was the case in the last cruise, the fleet will sail from Hampton Roads, and its going will be made the occasion of another notable review, such as marked the departure of the fleet under Admiral Evans, when the sixteen battleships were reviewed by President Roosevelt from the naval yacht Mayflower, as they headed for the Virginia Capes to begin the voyage around the world. When the cruise starts next November President Taft and Secretary of the Navy Meyer will again review it, it is expected, the departing fleet from the bridge of the Mayflower.

While the itinerary of the next cruise has not been made public, it is known that the direction this time will be east instead of south, the ships heading for a port in Europe, probably Gibraltar. On its arrival at Gibraltar the fleet will divide into four divisions, one or the other of the divisions visiting every important port in the Mediterranean. The itinerary, after the round of visits to the Mediterranean ports, is not yet known, even to the naval officers.

Many naval officers say, however, they would not be surprised if the voyage was continued through the Suez Canal and to the Philippines. If the ships get that far these officers say they would not be surprised if the route was extended to San Francisco, and then home by way of the Strait of Magellan, which would mean another round-the-world voyage with the itinerary reversed, but with Hampton Roads the beginning and the end, as was the case in the last cruise.

The fleet that will go in November will be a vastly greater aggregation of fighters than was the one that started under Admiral Evans and ended its voyage under Admiral Sperry. In numbers it will be the same, but in strength, both offensive and defensive, it will be almost double that of the former fleet. This time four great battleships of the Dreadnought type will be included in the sixteen. These vessels will be the Delaware, North Dakota, South Carolina, and the Michigan, three of which are already in commission, and the fourth of which, the North Dakota, has just been ordered commissioned.

The Dreadnoughts will constitute a division by themselves, with the Delaware or North Dakota as the flagship. The battleship Connecticut, which was the flagship on the former cruise, will again fly the pennant of the commander in chief. The officer who will exercise supreme command will be Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder, the present commander in chief, who assumed command when Admiral Sperry hauled down his flag when the fleet arrived home last year.

In addition to the Dreadnoughts there will be three other vessels in the fleet that were not part of it on the former cruise. These ships are the New Hampshire, Mississippi, and Idaho.

The battleships that went around the world with Admirals Evans and Sperry, but which will not be in the fleet next November, are the Kentucky, Kearsarge, Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, and Alabama. These vessels are already—or soon will be—put on the reserve list.

Large Congregations in Episcopal Churches Also Aid Crusaders.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 10.—This was the day of prayer for the city set apart by the Pittsburg Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church as a result of the graft revelations. Not in months has there been such a full attendance at the different churches, and contributions at no time have been more liberal. In all churches of that denomination the ministers preached on the subjects which had been designated by Bishop Cortlandt Whitehead in his circular letter sent out early last week. The collections will be turned over to the societies conducting vice and graft crusades.

To-morrow promises to be one of the most eventful days in the graft crusade. The name of the mysterious person who paid out the big moneys at the New York hotel to the grafting Pittsburg Councilmen will either be made known or some very rich men of Pittsburg are likely to go to jail for contempt of court. District Attorney Blakely late this afternoon said he had not changed his intention of forcing some of them to tell what they know.

There was a mysterious meeting of bankers and business men interested in banks at the Duquesne Club this afternoon. It was decided to fight the order of the District Attorney that they come into court to-morrow and tell what they know about grafting.

WIND BOTHERS HORSES.

Fast Time Impossible in Speedway Brushes—Kim in Winning Form.

A strong wind and dust storm made fast brushing out of the question yesterday morning on the Speedway, although a larger number of horses was out than on any Sunday this Spring. The attendance, as usual, was very large, and the crowd would have had a chance to see high-class sport had it not been for the unfavorable wind, which caused a postponement of a number of matched and prearranged events. Among the early arrivals was Joseph F. Gibbons's Claro, who, after a few warming-up heats, raced against E. Edelmyer's Ready Boy, 2:16½, winning rather handily. Ulrich, 2:20¼, was driven by George Geringer of Riverdale. Ulrich's only win was against Sol. B. Wolff's Minnie Albert, 2:13¼.

Gus Osberne, behind Trixie H., 2:13½, was much in evidence. His first effort against Thomas Lawson's Jap was rather disastrous, but Trixie H. fully redeemed herself later by winning from Jap and also finishing ahead of Ed Bass's Oakland Baron filly, the latter winning one out of three.

Charles Hubbard, who was one of the best trotters on the Speedway last Fall, was out yesterday with Farrell in the wagon, and started two heats with James A. Murphy's Kim, 2:13¾. In the first heat Hubbard made a break early, and could not regain his clip until Kim had passed the wire much slacked up. In the second the black trotter lost the heat by a short margin. After beating Trixie H. in a close finish, Dandy C. O., 2:21½, driven by E. J. McElmeel, started against Sol B. Wolff's Minnie Albert, losing two of three well-contested heats. Old Americus appeared again after an absence of two weeks, but had only one tilt—T. O. Nell's Lady Tasteful, winning handily.

Aristo, (2:08¾,) driven by Fred Gross, was started against Thomas G. Hinds's Ismalian (2:23¾) in one heat, and won in a close finish.

The arrangements made by Dr. J. H. Ferster, Chairman of the Brush Committee, for regular brushes yesterday had to be postponed until next Sunday, when a rare treat is promised to harness-sport lovers. President Gibbons's Claro (2:11½) will race against James A. Murphy's Coast Marie, the Speedway's champion pacer. C. Hackett has agreed to race Who Knows against Sol B. Wolff's Minnie Albert. Thomas G. Hinds and Fred Gross will have a whole week to get their trotters, Ismalian and Aristo, ready for a match on Sunday, and if all arrangements go through Ed J. La Place will race his pacer, Kate Nelson, against Thomas B. Leahy's new pacer, Princess Direct, (2:14¼.) While horsemen are waiting for these matches with much interest, a few of them who are in the secret will watch another race to-morrow about noon. It will be a friendly match between W. J. Minor's Speedway veteran, Hiram Abiff, (2:19¾,) and William Scott's new pacer, Louise E., (2:11¾.)

Step Lively was shown as a newcomer yesterday by J. Libovitz, and made a good impression. Among the spectators yesterday was A. J. Welch, manager of the Readville track, who had not been on the drive for many years, and for the second time he admired the great drive and regretted the fact that there were so many more pacers than trotters driven on it. After the brushes Mr. Welch had a long consultation with local horsemen at the clubrooms in regard to the future of the New York Grand Circuit meeting.

HOSPITAL CHILDREN AMUSED.

Circus Clowns and Tumblers Give a Special Show on Randall's Island.

There was much excitement in the Randall's Island Hospital for Orphan and Crippled Children yesterday afternoon, when the clown and stage tumblers of the Barnum & Bailey Circus and several funmakers of the White Rats' Association gave a special performance in the school room of the island hospital. There were 1,400 children present, and the fun lasted until bedtime. La Pearl, the clown, presented each of the children with a jumping jack at the conclusion of his turn.

The circus people sent over all of the jugglers and tumblers and as many of the clowns as could be accommodated on the stage of the school room. The White Rats sent over several musical funmakers, Eddie Foy and Harry Mountford among the number. The performers seemed to enjoy the afternoon as much as the children, for everybody did several extra stunts. The fun began at 1 o'clock, and it took until dinner time to finish the thirty-act programme.

The entertainment was planned by Deputy Charities Commissioner Goodwin. Deputy Commissioner Drummond, who made the only speech of the afternoon, said that as many performances of a similar character as could be arranged would be given this Summer. It was announced also that 200 of the children would be taken to Madison Square Garden Monday afternoon to see the whole of the circus.

SUFFRAGE REFORM PARADE IN BERLIN

Socialists and Radicals, 120,000 Strong, March Through Streets Magically Cleared of Police.

ALL IN MILITARY ORDER

At Bugle Signal Mass Meeting Votes to Fight for Equal Ballot Till Victory Is Won.

BERLIN, April 10.—At least 120,000 Socialists and Radicals took part to-day in the most impressive demonstration ever held in Berlin in favor of suffrage reform in Russia. From 11 o'clock in the morning the streets echoed with the measured tread of marching men—earnest-looking individuals—from every precinct in the city, whose way led toward the Humboldt Main, the Friedrichshain, and Treptow Park, where Police Commissioner von Jagow had sanctioned open air meetings.

Owing to the recent outspoken criticism of the police methods in the repression of popular expression of the will, the Police Commissioned had withdrawn his former prohibition, on assurance from the Socialist leaders that no disturbances would occur, and that traffic would not be disturbed. Men and woman gathered at the district headquarters of the Socialists at an early hour, and from there marched off in groups of 100, under control of stewards wearing red armbands, toward the allotted meeting places.

There was no shouting or singing as the crowds passed through the streets, from which the police seemed to have disappeared as if by magis. The squads arrived at the parks about 1 o'clock with military precision. There they gathered around sixteen improvised and numbered platforms, from which at the sound of a bugle Socialist and Radical members of the Reichstag and Landtag began addresses, in which they vehemently denounced the injustices of the present system of elctions. For an hour and a half th orators continued amid deafening cheers, and at 2:30 another bugle sounded, and for one minute utter silence prevailed.

Then a resolution, declaring that it was the determination of those gathered together to fight for reform until victory had been won for the people, was passed by acclamation. Enthusiastic scenes ensued, and there was great cheering for the rights of the democracy, while 100,000 voices broke into the stirring strains of th eWorkman's Marseillaise and the Song of Freedom, but they disisted on orders from the leaders.

The meeting then disbanded, the original groups marching off as they had come, without the slightest disorder. The entire Berlin garrison was confined to barracks all day as a measure of precaution, but the services of the military were not required.

Twelve meetings were held in halls in the suburbs, and these also passed off without untoward incident. The most significant features of to-day's manifestation were the orderly manner in which it was conducted, the police in the future having no reason for refusing Socialists' requests for open air assemblages, and the co-operation between the Socialists and Radicals, this being the first time in which they joined in such a demonstration, indicating the depth of feeling among the workers regarding the necessity of suffrage reform.

Commissioner von Jagow, who, in civilian clothes, looked on at the demonstration, was utterly surprised at the discipline and good order.

SHARP REPLY TO O'BRIEN.

Lloyd-George Says Irishman Spoke Untruth and Betrayed Confidence Besides

LONDON, April 10.—Chancellor Lloyd-George to-day characterized the statements made by William O'Brien at Cork last night as "grossly untrue and a disgraceful breach of confidence."

Mr. O'Brien said in his speech at Cork that the Chancellor had promised the Nationalists as concessions for their support of the Budget relief from various taxes and also new provisions for the land purchase measure conditional on Messrs. Redmond and Dillon meeting Messrs. O'Brien and Healy for the purpose of coming to an agreement.

PROTESTANT UNITY GETS A SETBACK

Ministers of Church Federation Angry at Speech of Bishop Greer.

WANTED TO ORDAIN ALL

Dr. Parkhurst Makes Tart Reply—Episcopals Are Ecclesiastical Snobs, Says Christ Church Pastor.

The attempt of the Federation of Churches of New York to bring about unity among Protestants by bringing ministers together in a conference has resulted in relations more strained than they have been for some years, due, it is said, to speeches made at the one meeting that has been held. Greatest exception was taken to the address of Bishop David H. Greer, who presided.

On taking the chair the Bisnop said he wished he might have the opportunity to ordain everybody present. Some were ruffled, but by agreement one speaker replied, opposing stoutly the idea.

The temper among Protestant ministers as a result of Bishop Greer's speech, is shown by the action of the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst. To the wish of Bishop Greer that he be allowed to ordain all other Protestant ministers, the pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church is said to have sent word to Bishop Greer that he is ready to be ordained by the Episcopal Bishop at any time the Episcopal Bishop is ready to be ordained by him. It could not be learned yesterday what reply the Bishop sent.

Other Protestant ministers admitted they had been talking a good deal among their friends on the subject, but all declined to talk for publication.

Bishop Greer's request for all ministers to preach yesterday on Christian unity was generally obeyed, but the Rev. George Alexander Strong, in Christ Church fortified behind recent statements by Bishop oDane of Albany and Bishop Brent of the Philippines said some sharp things yesterday. The attitude of most Episcopalians toward other Christian bodies he called "ecclesiastical snobbery," and the assumption they often make concerning their position in the Christian world, he called "contemptible arrogance, unworthy Christian men and women."

"Christianity has lost its moral leadership in a great part of the world," he said, "and one reason is its division. Such division will never be healed while some parties maintain a 'holier than thou' attitude."

Speaking on apostolic succession, the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Congregationalist, said in his sermon yesterday that Congregationalists are wrong in not insisting upon ordination by priests who have been ordained by those who preceded them, and so on back to Christ.

When the present Broadway Tabernacle was opened, a few years ago, he said, the late Bishop Potter was present, and said that his own ordination came from above, that of the Tabernacle pastor from below. It took both Bishop and pastor to explain that the Bishop's ordination had come down through a long line, like that of Kings, while the pastor's ordination was from the people. One was monarchical, the other democratic.

To-morrow the second conference is to be held. The Rev. Dr. C. F. Aked is to preside and Mayor Gaynor is to speak, but it is expected that he will take no side in the controversy.

ESTAB OVER HALF A CENTURY

SAY HIS WINE KILLED BOY.

Police Have Complaints Also That Agent Gave Counterfeit Money.

On suspicion of having caused the death of a nine-year-old boy through the agency of drugged cordials, and charged with having counterfeit money in his possession, a man who says he is Nekola Anuzito was arrested last evening as he was running from the entrance of 311 East 111th Street. The arrest was brought about by relatives of the dead boy, Dominick A. Fiazelli, who died on March 29 last, the day following the one on which he drank a quantity of anisette, alleged to have been sold to John Fiazelli, his father, by the prisoner.

Fiazelli lives at 311 East 111th Street. It was on March 28 that Dominick returned from school and begged his mother for a penny. She didn't give it to him, and the boy sulked and finally crawled under a bed. There he found a bottle of anisette and swallowed about a pint of the cordial. Soon afterward he was seized with convulsions, and died the following day.

The police say they received many complaints from persons who declared that a wine agent had given them counterfeit money in change. Last evening as Policemen Reilly and Hogan were standing at 111th Street and First Avenue Rose Fiazelli, a cousin of the dead boy, ran to them and whispered that the suspected salesman was then in the Fiazelli home trying to sell more of the cordial. The policemen arrested him. They say he threw away two counterfeit bills.

'RAGTIME' PREACHING SCORED

Bishop McIntyre Denounces Sermons on Politics, Literature, and Travel.

SARATOGA, N. Y., April 10.—"Ragtime preaching," with poetry, politics, literature, and travel as themes, was condemned to-day by Bishop McIntyre of St. Paul, Minn., in an address to the candidates seeking admission to the Troy Methodist Conference. He told them they would attain success, not by following the custom of clergymen who "serve religion cold," but by ardently preaching the great truths of the Church. Moreover, they should be content with small salaries, he advised them, and should not be continually seeking for better appointments.

"You will never lack money if you are faithful," the Bishop said. "I never knew an active Methodist minister who was in want."

The conference will close to-morrow morning with the assignment of clergymen for next year. It is not expected that there will be many changes in the larger churches of the conference.

The Troy Conference Laymen's Association has elected these officers: President, Charles Gibson of Albany; Secretary, Charles McKernon of Pittsfield, Mass.; Treasurer, Henry Spadholtz of Poultney, Vt.

Mr. Motorist:

If you are going to buy a car this season, and would like "to be shown," we wish we might take you into the Mora factory at Newark, New York, and show you a MORA "Light Four" that is owned by Mr. W. W. Hibbard of Rochester, New York. This car has seen over SEVEN THOUSAND MILES of actual road work, since it came into Mr. Hibbard's possession—a new car. It is now being thoroughly overhauled FOR THE FIRST TIME. We would like to be able to go through in detail with you the mechanism of this car—show you the gears, the bearings, the pistons, and every other part where there is apt to be friction or wear. As a matter of fact, there is practically nothing to be replaced on this car, and it will go out on the road again—for another seven thousand miles AS GOOD AS NEW. Here is a living example of MORA motor efficiency—an example that proves the Mechanically Right principles, which serve to make it a STRENUOUSLY RELIABLE car. There is nothing else in the $2,500 class that can compare with it—and we cannot believe but that it is the peer of any car at higher cost.

Yours very truly,

THE RISKS OF LABOR.

On Wednesday a very important hearing will be held at Albany. It will be with regard to the report of the Commission to inquire into the question of employers' liability, a Commission appointed last year, which has made a remarkably thorough and intelligent use of the limited time at its disposal. The report and the measures submitted with it deserve careful and favorable consideration for three substantial reasons: Because very serious evils exist of a moral and economic nature; because the legislation proposed is logically and practically directed to those evils, and because the remedies presented are tentative and can be extended or modified as experience shall show the need. We may add—and it is no small matter—that the Commission does not suggest many new detailed provisions of law or any elaborate addition to the machinery of administration. On the contrary, the system proposed is intended to be, and doubtless will prove to be, in great degree operative through direct dealings between employers and employés, with as little occasion as possible for litigation.

The one fact in the present situation that stands out clearly and is not disputed is that there is enormous loss of life and serious or permanent injury, with still greater temporary injury, in the industries of the State. During the three years ending with 1909 there were reported to the Labor Department 853 deaths, 11,933 serious injuries, and 37,937 temporary injuries. In this destruction of life and permanent or temporary impairment of the ability to work, three parties suffer. Primarily the dependents of workmen and the workmen themselves; then the community at large, which loses the labor of the killed or disabled and must support the dependents, and, finally, the employers, whose loss is partly material and, still more, moral, arising from the friction unavoidable in relations resulting in such cruel suffering in the class with which they must co-operate. In dealing with this undisputed state of things, three objects have been pursued by the Commission, first to secure the greatest attainable degree of justice in the treatment of the direct sufferers, whether workmen or their employers; second, the distribution of inevitable loss as widely and as equitably as practicable; third, as far as may be, to check and prevent the loss and injury due to industrial risks.

The Commission proposes a radical change in the principle governing compensation for injuries. There is no denying that. But the change is one that has been made in nearly every industrial nation in the world except our own, and the manner of change suggested is as moderate and conservative as is consistent with accomplishing any good. In the United States we still adhere to the principle of the old English common law, which in substance is that the employer shall be held accountable only for his willful negligence or misconduct. This principle, which was fair enough a century since, ignores the plain fact that, with the introduction of machinery and the very great extension and development of that machinery and its uses, there have grown up literally inevitable and inherent risks, the suffering and loss from which now fall on those least responsible for danger and least capable of sustaining the burden. Under the old law, which is generally the law in this country, not only is the employers' liability limited, but it is still further reduced by two collateral requirements. One is that the complainant workman must show affirmatively that he was not guilty of contributive negligence; the other is that the employer cannot be held for the consequences of the conduct of a fellow-servant of the sufferer. To these requirements must be added the general legal doctrine that the workman assumes the risks inherent in his calling. In the coks of this intricate legal machinery and its workings the workman is caught, often helplessly.

The change that the Commission proposes, and which, as we have said, is unquestionably radical, is substantially that the employer shall be accountable for injuries to his employés, in certain specified classes of exceedingly dangerous employment, unless the person injured can be shown affirmatively to have been willfully negligent or to have violated reasonable rules imposed for his safety and that of his fellows. The plea of contributive negligence is not abolished, but it is made a plea in defense and the burden of proof is upon the employer. The plea of risk from a fellow-workman is modified, and the employer is held for the consequences of the misconduct of any agent who has authority over others, or who is charged with inspection. These are the substantial modifications of the situation of the injured workman. But within the eight classes of trade specified in the bill prepared by the Commission, provision is made for compulsory compensation in case of accident. The scale of compensation is substantial but does not appear unduly liberal Broadly speaking, it is four years' pay at the rate of earning when the accident occurs, if the workman is killed, but not exceeding $3,000; in case of injury disabling the workman for more than two weeks, the compensation is one-half his average earnings less what he may receive in benefit or allowance from his employer and less any wage he may be capable of earning, the gross amount not to exceed damage suffered, or to be more than $10 a week, or to extend over more than eight years. In England, where the wage is lower, the total is limited to three years' earnings. The injured person or his representatives have the option to take this compensation, or to sue under the general law, but cannot have both.

The underlying idea of the obligatory compensation is that if paid by the employer the amount can be recovered in higher prices to the consumer, and this is probably correct in a general way, where the law is broadly applied. In this way the loss is expected to be distributed widely in the community and not to fall with undue weight on any small portion. Especially it will not fall as at present on the injured persons and their dependents, who obviously are least able to bear it. On the other hand, it is expected, and the expectation is reasonable, that obligatory compensation will render the employers more careful and energetic in the prevention of injury and in the adoption of safety appliances. So far as can be judged by experience in other countries this result has substantially been attained. The alternative to this plan is the plan of obligatory insurance, of which there are several forms in operation in other countries, as well as some that are only partly obligatory. There are obstacles deemed by the Commission to be insuperable, mainly Constitutional, to the introduction of these plans in our law. The classes of industry to which the law proposed is to be applied are those of dangerous construction, those requiring the use of compressed air, explosives, high electric currents, and general railway work. Of course it is recognized that there are other occupations that logically might be included, but it is reasoned that there can be no serious dispute as to these specified, and the list can be extended if it seems best after experience.

Whatever may be the outcome, Senator WAINWRIGHT and his associates are entitled to hearty commendation for the careful and thorough way in which they have done their work, and for the impartial and candid spirit in which they have tried to consider all interests involved.

MR. BECKWITH'S DEPARTURE.

The determination of Mr. CARROLL BECKWITH, a distinguished painter and a good citizen, to give up his residence in New York will cause much regret. His services to American art will, of course, not be lessened while he is in Rome. The pictures he paints there will be as worthy as those he has painted here, and his fame will still be cherished by his countrymen. Living abroad he will increase the credit of American art abroad, like Mr. SARGENT, Mr. ABBEY, and Mr. SHANNON. Nevertheless the presence and personal influence of Mr. BECKWITH will be missed here by his fellow-Academicians and the other artists and art amateurs of the community, while, by his self-chosen exile, New York will lose an energetic, public-spirited citizen, of clear views and the power to express them, a forcible and constructive critic of public matters.

Particularly interesting of late has been Mr. BECKWITH'S expression of his ideas as to the needs of Central Park. He believes that much of the landscape architecture of our principal pleasure ground is antiquated and requires improvement. His plan to remove the ugly wall and terrace the sides and ends of the Park deserves cordial approval. The wall ought to go. Much can be done to make Central Park more beautiful. The plan to extend the wide avenue called the Mall northward without interruption would require radical changes which are not likely to be made. But the city will miss Mr. BECKWITH, his enthusiasm and his ideas.

POLITICIANS' BOOKKEEPING.

When the curiosity of Ali Baba was aroused as to the business of the Forty Thieves, he adopted the simple device of smearing the measure in which the commodities they dealt in were handled, and enough sequins stuck to the sides and bottom to reveal the secret of the precious company. A service not without analogy to this is served by the check of Mr. KENNEDY to Mr. ALDRIDGE, with the indorsement of the latter. It shows where the money seems to have stuck.

It is claimed by the recipient and primary beneficiary of this handsome douceur that it was devoted to the uses of the Republican organization in Monroe County, but there appears to be no means of establishing this statement. It is a very strict rule with honest men handling funds for others, or in which others have an interest, to make and keep a detailed and authentic account of all transactions, and this is so absolute a rule that the law, when such accounts are not kept of fiduciary funds, assumes that they have not been honestly handled. The trustee becomes directly responsible for every dollar that cannot distinctly be traced. This rule has never been observed as to moneys collected for partisan uses, partly, no doubt, because these uses often will not bear the light of day, and partly because it is not to the profit of the men who handle the money to give too close an account of either its source or its destination.

Indeed, there is nothing more curious in the history of representative institutions than the development of a party system of finance involving large sums as to which accountability hardly exists. Naturally the opportunity for dishonest practices is great. When, therefore, Mr. ALDRIDGE says as to money shown to have been taken by him from a person interested in legislation he had promoted that he used it "for the Republican Party," it is unfortunate for him that the statement is incapable of anything like conclusive confirmation. He simply voluntarily ranges himself in the ranks of a class of men notoriously loose in their money dealings, and his association with them is reason for discredit rather than for credit. They are an unwholesome class, and it may be said of most of them that, unlike the gallant family of whom ENID sang:

> Their hearts are little, though their hoard is great.

JAMES T. WOODWARD.

The loss to the banking community in the death of JAMES T. WOODWARD, for thirty years President of the Hanover National Bank, is one not easily measured, and will be still less easily made up. Mr. WOODWARD was not only actively engaged in the daily routine of banking, but he was one of that group of leading bankers in New York who in times of financial stress are accustomed by consultation and the union of effort to take measures for the common safety. In such times Mr. WOODWARD was always willing to give his opinions and freely to supply his allotted proportion of banking resources to check or avert alarm and panic.

Mr. WOODWARD was frequently consulted by officials in Washington, and his letter books, if they could see the light, would be found to contain many communications to Presidents or Secretaries of the Treasury abounding in wise counsels and practical suggestions.

Mr. WOODWARD was a banker of long experience, but he had some qualities which experience does not always bring. His inflexible adherence to sound and safe banking methods and practices was proverbial. He insisted that his bank should engage in no transaction that would not bear the full light of day and undergo without criticism the scrutiny of bank examiners, of his own Directors, and of himself, and he was the most severe of all. He demonstrated that it was possible to build up a great and prosperous bank without departing in the least from sound practice.

Mr. WOODWARD loved his broad domain in Maryland, which he kept up in something like the state that was very much more common before the war than now. He was a loyal and wise friend of the South. He deplored as the soundest Democrats of the South have always deplored the fatuous persistence of the Southern Democracy in floundering always in the bog of Bryanism. By good counsels and by his influence he did what he could to rescue his party, but in vain.

While in business matters men may sometimes have felt that Mr. WOODWARD was firm to the verge of brusqueness, his heart had a peculiarly tender side, and he made it both a duty and a pleasure to extend the helping hand where help was needed and deserved. Whether in his relation to affairs or in the private and personal way, JAMES T. WOODWARD was a man of fine and noble character, and his life was an exemplary one.

The Congressmen who have decided to make it a penal offense to give or receive tips in Washington restaurants will be no more than consistent if they vote for the bill of Mr. RANSDELL of Texas prohibiting all gratuities to members of Congress, such as telegraph, telephone, or express franks, free or reduced transportation, and legal fees from public service corporations.

Dr. JONATHAN HUTCHINSON, a British medical investigator of renown, has long insisted that cancer originates from a fish diet. President TAFT now asks Congress to appropriate $50,000 for the erection and equipment of laboratories to test this theory. That fish are afflicted with a malady resembling cancer seems to be generally believed.

Why either Bentley Manor or Tottenville? Why not Richmond Borough, New York City, Station Q or X, as the case may be?

It has transpired, through the discovery of some old letters in England, that WASHINGTON was almost offered a dukedom on the condition that he should serve King GEORGE rather than the uprising colonists. History is full of similar cases. But there is no authority for believing that Mayor FITZGERALD of Boston has appointed ex-Mayor HIBBARD City Collector for any other reason than that Mr. HIBBARD, who was a good Mayor, will make a good Collector. To be sure, if Mr. HIBBARD had not run for Mayor in the recent election, Mr. STORROW might have been elected over Mr. FITZGERALD.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Mother with a Grievance.

Doctors are very fond of discussing among themselves the physical and psychical peculiarities of us common people, and anybody who has access to their "literature," especially its periodical portion, can find many descriptions, some instructive, some amusing, and all interesting, of our assorted queernesses. We are shown as good patients and bad, as paying and not paying our bills, as lamentably inclined toward patent medicines and healing fads—as almost everything, indeed, except plain ordinary human beings, not very different from the doctors themselves and rather resentful of the professional habit of treating us as creatures of an inferior order.

And rarely indeed do the doctors realize that, just as they study patients, so the patients study them, and arrive at conclusions strangely at variance from the laboriously inculcated doctrine that all doctors, regularly educated and licensed, are inexhaustible wells of infallible science. We are able, as an illustration of the way in which doctors are analyzed and judged by those who are supposed to accept their every word with reverence, to quote a few lines recently written by a mother whose little boy had been subjected to a difficult and delicate operation, the success of which was hoped rather than expected. She writes:

> Dr. —— tried to explain it all to me, and I think I have it all down. It was an awful shock, although I knew the attempt would be something of an experiment. But it was too near the operation for me to be able to stand anything except encouragement. I didn't fall down—I sat down. I don't believe he knew. I wouldn't let that man see me cry or faint if I had to bite off my tongue to prevent it. Human beings are all either specimens or instruments to him. The mother specimen, in his books, is all emotion and impulse, and a rather useless instrument, but this specimen isn't going to give him any data from which to prove his proposition. I feel as if I hate him most of the time, but if he has saved my boy's leg I can worship him.

The sense of grievance here expressed is a curious one, and not easy of explanation, but somehow, evidently, the well-intentioned surgeon managed to make himself seem to the mother what he almost certainly was not—only a scientist, coldly and impersonally dealing with a "case."

"Absolutely Illegal Proceedings."

When District Attorney WHITMAN said last week of the disposition made of a case by the Special Sessions Justices, "It was an absolutely illegal proceeding," an issue was raised which can hardly be allowed to remain unsettled.

What the Justices did was to allow a man charged with breaking the automobile speed law to plead guilty as a first offender, though it was on record and known that he had already been once convicted and fined for the same offense. This was done because, in the opinion of the court, the penalty prescribed for a second offense was in this instance too severe, and the Justices preferred to inflict the fine provided for a first offense as better, on the one hand, than letting the man go without punishment, or, on the other, imposing an excessive sentence. That is what Mr. WHITMAN calls "an absolutely illegal proceeding," while in the eyes of the Justices it is the assumption and exercise of a necessary discretion.

The controversy is evidently one for expert decision, but to most laymen, especially to those who have had a few narrow escapes from death under the wheels of overspeeded and carelessly run automobiles, the inclination will be to side with the District Attorney. A particularly audacious layman, indeed, might venture the suggestion that, while the Justices may possibly be correct in their contention that the law as it stands improperly restricts their discretionary powers, their province is to enforce the law rather than to ignore or even to amend it.

A second offense is not really turned into a first offense by calling it one, and, after all, the law is not so terribly rigid, since it permits the Justices, not only to suspend the second offender's sentence altogether if they choose, but they can fine him anywhere between $50 and $100 should they not want to go the length of imprisoning him for thirty days. Most automobilists would survive even the severest of these penalties, and any automobilist with fairly decent luck—and intentions—can avoid them all if he only will.

Pleasing, but Not Probable.

Few of us have seen many empty cars going uptown in the forenoon and downtown in the afternoon on the Second and Third Avenue Elevated roads, but in theory, at least, there must be a good many of them, since the morning and evening rushes are in the other directions and storage facilities are small in the lower end of the city.

Therefore it may well be that the company can afford to adopt the suggestion of Tenement House Commissioner MURPHY and let the women and children of the east side buy for 2 cents round-trip tickets to and from Bronx Park, valid only in the hours of slack traffic. Thereby might the unequal distribution of passengers, of which there has been so much complaint, be somewhat or even largely mitigated, for, of course, there are many people who would ride for 2 cents, though 10 cents would be more than they could afford to pay for a pleasure trip. Their transportation would add little or nothing to operating expenses, and the resulting revenue—assuming that there really are cars now empty—would be almost all clear gain.

Mr. HEDLEY is said to have received the Commissioner's suggestion with interest, and to have promised to investigate its feasibility. The chances are, however, that he will find a good many difficulties in the way, and we have a lurking suspicion that his conclusion will be unfavorable to the plan. The very thought of a fare less than 5 cents is terrifying to the purveyors of urban transportation.

The Milk Trouble.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since, unfortunately, 9 cents a quart is about our upward limit, we gulp hard and swallow the invisible typhoid germs in our milk, praying a kind Providence to render us immune, but how, short of blindness, are we to be spared the sight of the dirt sediment in the bottom of the bottles? We have tried three of the best-known companies this Winter, only to find the dirt, like the poor, always with us. We have complained, and the companies have promised—in vain! Won't other housekeepers join us in the demand for microbes which shall be, at least, invisible—or shall we form a No Milk Trust?

CLEANLINESS.

Crowded Fifth Avenue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The much-discussed question of "loitering" on Fifth Avenue, between Fourteenth and Twenty-third Streets, by the employes of the various loft buildings during the noon luncheon hour could and should be corrected.

The difficulty is quite as much how they walk as the number of people walking or standing still. The large majority are foreigners, who in childhood were not taught to confine their perambulations to the necessities of a large city. Their method is decidedly serpentine. Let them walk not more than four abreast, keep to the right and keep moving.

WOULD IMPERIL THE NATION'S SICK

Dr. Rusby Sounds Warning that a Raid Is Planned on the Pharmacopoeia.

BOGUS DRUGS HELD ABROAD

Declares Vast Quantities Will Flood This Country If Book of Federal Standards Is Impaired.

Declaring that an organized and very powerful effort is being made to rob the United States Pharmacopoeia, at its coming revision in Washington on May 10 of standard tests for strength and purity of medicinal drugs that enter into the prescriptions for patients throughout the Nation, and that commercial interests are striving to prevent the introduction of further standards and to degrade still others, Dean Henry H. Rusby of the College of Pharmacy of Columbia University, the United States expert on the qualifications of drugs entering this port and pharmacognosist for the Health Department of New York City, yesterday gave to THE TIMES a statement anticipating the meeting to-night at the College of Pharmacy of the New York Branch of the American Phamaceutical Association, of which he is the National President. At this meeting the principles on which the book of Federal standards is to be revised will be thoroughly discussed. Dr. Rusby's statement is prepared especially to be laid before the convention at Washington of the American Pharmaceutical Association May 7-9, when the principles that will guide the revisers are to be finally thrashed out. "But I regard it as of high importance," he said yesterday, "that this matter be first presented to the public, whom it primarily and vitally concerns."

Dr. Rusby says he is not only opposing the commercial interests, but "a relatively small group of physicians who insist that drugs of which they disapprove, no matter how widely they are used in prescriptions of the majority of the profession, shall be thrust out of the book of standards, thus depriving the Government of power to require that they be of definite purity and strength."

Here is the first installment of the statement, that relating to the physicians' part in revising the Pharmacopoeia being withheld for later publication:

"The effect of Federal recognition of the standards set by the United States Pharmacopoeia since the enactment of the Federal pure drugs law has been to reduce serious adulterations and imperfections to about 10 per cent. of what they were five years ago.

"But the rigid enforcement of standards has engendered the bitter antagonism of foreign agencies concerned in the production and importation to this country of medicinal drugs. The doctors of the United States depend upon foreign sources for the bulk—certainly 80 per cent., probably 90 per cent.—of the drugs they prescribe for patients. Within two years enormous quantities of spurious and defective drugs have been rejected at this and other ports and reshipped to Europe. There they have been again rejected by the health officers of England, Germany, and other countries.

"I have most trustworthy reports that the drug warehouses at Trieste, Amsterdam, Hamburg, and other important centres abroad are stuffed to overflowing with these worthless medicaments, and with still greater quantities of drugs that have been withheld from shipment to the United States out of the conviction that they would be turned back. I am also informed that their owners are waiting in the belief, encouraged by commercial interests on this side, that the standards in the next Pharmacopoeia will be so modified as to let down the bars for their admission.

"For one illustration out of many, take the case of asafetida. Before the Federal law was enacted the asafetida imported into this country was abominable in quality—so bad, indeed, that at the next preceding revision of the Pharmacopoeia the advice was given to abolish the standard for this drug, it being represented that otherwise we could not get sufficient supplies. The Revision Committee resisted this temptation and adopted a standard which, though applicable only to an adulterated article—it is deplorable that they were compelled to permit any degree of adulteration—nevertheless assured a fairly good article. As a result, after the enactment of the Federal drugs law the asafetida arriving in this port became unobjectionable, its quality running even above that required.

"Within the last sixty days, however, conditions have absolutely changed. The supplies of asafetida now arrive in a highly adulterated condition, the adulterants being of the grossest and crudest. Of course these inferior shipments have been made at this particular time with the intent of influencing the Pharmacopoeia Revision Committee again to lower its standard.

"Unquestionably there exists in the drug trade of this country a very powerful element that aids and abets foreign dealers in their efforts to invade our ports with objectionable stocks of drugs. One of the New York drug trade journals has lately sounded its war cry by an open denial of facts about the adulteration of foreign supplies of drugs, abundantly proved by the Federal authorities. Those working behind this publication seek to reduce and degrade the drug standards in the forthcoming revision of the Pharmacopoeia, and to prevent the introduction of more and better standards. If they succeed, our ports will immediately be flooded by the objectionable merchandise awaiting the signal to come in. Inasmuch as these drugs make up the bulk of the druggists' stocks, why should they not be held to standards of purity and quality?

"The book of standards for strength and purity of drugs as recognized by the Federal Government is primarily for the benefit of the sick people of the Nation. Their interest is paramount. It lies above the professional interest of physicians and the commercial interest of pharmacists and manufacturing chemists.

"What is the benefit of such a book? Without the standards which it provides, neither the medical nor the pharmaceutical profession can authoritatively identify, administer, compound, or prescribe medicinal drugs for patients, nor can any legal authority enforce purity and definite degrees of strength."

Running of Rivers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some years ago a geography class in a Michigan rural school was studying the Great Lakes, their outlets, &c. There was clear sailing until they came to the Niagara River, which looked on the map very much as if it flowed "up north"—but could it?

The pupils were divided in opinion, and the teacher doubtful, so the question was put to a vote. A handsome majority decided that it flows "down south"—of course, two little German-American brothers alone dissenting.

MERELY OPERATIC NERVES.

Views of a Mutual Friend on Manhattan Opera House Conflicts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Friends of the Manhattan Opera House and admirers of Mr. Oscar Hammerstein need not be alarmed, either by the reported outbreak of Miss Mary Garden or the suit entered against the impresario by the tenor Zenatello. Let them possess their souls in patience.

It has been a long and severe season at the Manhattan Opera House, and any one familiar with life in an operatic institution can understand the condition of the nerves of both artists and impresario at the end of such a season. Miss Garden, at such a time, must not be taken too literally or too seriously. At heart she is a sincere friend of Mr. Hammerstein, and no one has a higher regard for her as an artist and a woman than her director. Every allowance must be made for her "attack of nerves." Much indulgence must be granted to the "artistic temperament."

Mr. Hammerstein himself is an artist, and on occasion he, too, is entitled to indulgence in this respect. Those who know him best, however, know that back of it all is a great big heart, and that the success of his operatic institution is due to the intimate and kindly relations that exist between him and every member of his operatic household.

It is not likely that Mr. Hammerstein's character will undergo a sudden change. The operatic season is over and the Summer months will afford ample time for recreation and the replenishing of depleted nerve centres. When the season reopens next Fall these "nerve flurries" and explosions of "artistic temperament" will have been long gone and forgotten; even Mr. Zenatello will have discovered his mistake, and the future of the Manhattan Opera House, assured by Mr. Hammerstein's indomitable energy, musical enthusiasm, abnegation of commercialism, and unique genius, will be brighter than ever.

PSYCHIC PHENOMENA.

No Faith in Proofs of Prof. Hyslop and Prof. James.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Prof. Hyslop's remarkable article concerning Palladino and the Muensterberg exposure is of itself a valuable document. It shows very convincingly the singular folly of the so-called "psychical investigations" conducted by the American Society for Psychical Research, of which Prof. Hyslop is Secretary and prime moving spirit, and the utter non-sequitur of its system of research and reasoning.

The whole sum and substance of the matter is about this—the dictionary has been drawn upon for a respectable and scientific-sounding word with which to relabel a fraud; the term "psychical" has been perverted from its proper meaning, and attached to the moonings and maunderings of victims of that ancient humbug spiritualism, just as the designation "Christian Science" was applied to that other humbug Eddyism, a twin monument to organized weak-headedness.

Prof. Hyslop rails at the exposers of the spiritualistic fraud Palladino, and makes it a serious point of objection that Prof. Muensterberg did not specify who it was that seized Palladino's wandering bare foot, which was doing "spiritual" stunts of the kind which Prof. Hyslop considers so important.

He would do better to face and answer the cold, hard truth that the sum total of all his "psychical" explorings is precisely zero, that not one solitary proved fact has been placed upon record in support of his theories.

The same situation confronts "spiritualism" in general; not so much as an atom of matter ever moved the most infinitesimal fraction of an inch in response to "spiritual" force, or otherwise than in response to simple, everyday physical forces of the same sort that raise shovels or propel street cars or drive ocean steamers or waft thistledown through the air.

This eminent researcher's attitude toward a man who simply added one more to 10,000 already existing proofs of the fraud of "spiritualism" betrays a mind that is occupied with phantasy and is not attuned to the exact work of deriving logical conclusions from premises within the scope of reason. As respecting real scientific truth and desiring a maintenance of the proper use of words, I protest against recent performances of Prof. Hyslop, Prof. James, and their ilk in labeling their foolish dreams as "science" and their fond imaginings as "psychology." They are discrediting both.

FOREIGN SUBWAYS.

The Lesson for New York from London and Paris.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

New Yorkers seem to be clamoring for an independent system of Subways. In so doing, I wonder if they have studied the lesson that has been so dearly learned by the City of London, and of which she now so sadly laments? In London there are six separate and distinct underground tubes, with no physical connection. The result of this is that a passenger wanting to go from a station on any one of these tubes is compelled to pay a separate fare to each of the companies operating these individual tubes, in addition to being compelled to detrain, walk up stairs and perhaps a block or more before he can continue to destination.

How much better they do things across the channel. In Paris there is one system of municipally owned Subways, operated in its entirety by one company, and all for a single fare within specified zones. The result: Last year all of London's underground lines carried in round numbers only 168,000,000 passengers, while in Paris, a smaller city, the unified system carried the astounding total of 282,000,000 passengers. London has seen the error of her way, and a bill is now pending in Parliament providing for the amalgamation or three of her underground tubes. The other will doubtless soon fall in line.

All of which brings us face to face with a problem that New York is now trying to solve. If the proposed Broadway-Lexington Avenue line is constructed, either with city or private funds, and not operated by the Interborough, it will place every man, woman, and child wanting to go from a station on the present Subway to a station on the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line, or vice versa, upon a ten-cent basis. In other words, the prospective passenger will be compelled to pay two fares for exactly the same service that the Interborough has proposed for one fare.

Wasteful to Burn Grass.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The wastefulness of burning grass is perhaps not generally realized. By the burning of dead grass we remove the material which is to furnish humus and bacteria essential for plant growth. Resulting from this burning we have temporarily a small amount of ash, which stimulates a quick and unhealthy growth of grass, but the soluble parts of the ash are rapidly washed away by rains, so that we have not only a great loss from destruction of humus and bacteria but also a loss of part of the small valuable residue. Land subjected to grass fire must therefore quickly "run out" unless manure is added subsequently to take the place of the burned grass, and this is not commonly done.

Eucalyptus Trees.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the letter of "Old Australian" about eucalyptus trees, would say that I have grown them from seed for a number of years, but have not been able to preserve them for more than two Winters. I have only a small greenhouse, with a pipe from the kitchen boiler, and the frost usually kills them. I find the plants good for hay fever or similar nasal trouble.

In the Botanical Gardens in the Bronx they have a fine specimen of the Eucalyptus Globulus, which is the one I grow, but, of course, they are better able to take care of it than I am. Perhaps "Old Australian" knows of a likely specimen of the "Globulus" that would resist a moderate amount of cold.

CALLS ON CHURCHES TO FIGHT CORRUPTION

The Rev. Dr. Evans Advocates the Teaching of the Evils of Graft in Sunday Schools.

ALLDS CASE AN EXAMPLE

Dr. MacArthur Is More Hopeful—He Says Hughes Has Smitten the Bosses Hip and Thigh.

Jotham P. Allds of Chenango County, who resigned from the Senate of this State just before he was found guilty by that body of accepting a bribe to influence legislation, furnished themes for sermons to two New York preachers yesterday.

Dr. R. S. MacArthur, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, in a talk to his Current Events Class at the church building in Fifty-seventh Street, held that the recent exit of Allds from public life should be hailed with joy by all lovers of good government as a signal that it is time to cheer up in the prospect of good days ahead.

The Rev. Anthony H. Evans made the deposed boss the subject of his regular Sunday sermon at the West Presbyterian Church in Forty-second Street. He viewed the event as sinister, and urged that it be considered as a clarion call to the Church for a united effort in harvesting many another crop of the same sowing that is mature or ripening in the vineyard of State and city politics.

"We have been shocked and saddened," said the Rev. Mr. Evans, "by the revelations of corruption on the part of men occupying important and conspicuous trusts. And these revelations are not newspaper reports or the misrepresentations of envy and hostility, but facts thoroughly authenticated in court and legislative halls by competent witnesses and reliable confessions.

The Disgrace of Allds.

"The Senator whose downfall at Albany recently shocked this State and the Nation was a man of talent and personal magnetism. He had the opportunity to do notable service on behalf of his constituency and to further the general welfare. He rose to power and prestige, and he might have won for himself and retained the respect of all right thinking men, and have continued through many years his usefulness as a servant of the people. But he put upon his manhood a money price, and he sold it, throwing into the bargain his character and the happiness of his relatives.

"And what did it mean for him? Did the money compensate for the loss of power, the odium of conviction for taking bribes, the sorrow to his loved ones? The wives and families of those who served at Albany in obscurity—have they not much more of which they may well be proud, as their breadwinners return again to their routine tasks?"

The speaker then outlined recent exposures of graft in other cities than Albany, holding that since graft hides itself by every artifice its takers can invent these surface outcroppings must indicate a widespread zone for ministerial research underneath.

"This frightful epidemic of moral turpitude," he suggested, "is poisoning men by the wholesale with the virus of corruption, and in one great American city men are wending their way in companies to the office of the District Attorney, prostrated, humiliated, and frightened by the shadow of the penitentiary in whose gloom they dwell.

Selling Themselves for Dollars.

"How extraordinary is it that intelligent men, conversant with the demands of morality, should sell themselves for the sake of a few dollars and run the risk of bringing upon their innocent wives and children social ostracism and endless sadness and suffering.

"Where is it in this country that the corrupting force has its centre? Where can assault be best centred upon it so that it will be wiped out and the revelations at Albany and at Pittsburg cease to be an annual crop from what is going on in the silent places underneath?

"This powerful corrupting agency is working its way into political life as an epidemic of some physical disease spreads from city to city and State to State.

"And as we contemplate this fact we must face the grave and serious fact that no city and no State can progress with its moral standards going backward. The growth of colleges is nothing to point to with pride, if we cannot also claim a growth of virtue. And the increase of charitable giving is no compensation for the decrease of spirituality. Better a small apple that is wholesome and sound than a larger one rotten to the core.

"Can the Church then sit supinely still, viewing this political corruption from afar and saying she is not of it and it concerneth her not?

What the Church Should Do.

"Personally, in my church, I propose from now on to take the problem up, and I tackle it with courage and with hope, and the consciousness that something must be done, and at once. It is the function of the Church properly to enter this struggle and remain in it in spite of any protests that there is thereby created a mingling of Church and State."

As the most practicable present step to take in an effort to break the power of corruption, the speaker proposed the rearing of a young generation in the Sunday schools fully schooled in the unhappy ending of those who have gone by the graft route to ultimate exposure and disaster. The men figuring in recent events, he said, could well serve as examples to the younger generation as men whose paths in life they would do well to keep away from.

"Here and there," he said, "we have great captains of industry who are also actuated by high moral ideals. Let us celebrate them wherever we can find them. They come now and then in politics, in journalism, in business and in social life; it is they who strengthen the purposes of the morally weak; they make dishonesty repulsive, and it will be a great day for the country when this minority can become the vast majority and show us what real government by highly moral men can do."

Dr. MacArthur Hopeful.

In considering the Albany exposures as the final disruption of the power of the bosses, Dr. MacArthur told the members of his class in his Current Events that the machines of both parties were running worse now than ever before, and that Albany and Pittsburg were not more deeply sinful than before but were conscience-stricken with their guilt.

"They are endeavoring to purify themselves," he said, "and consequently this is no time for gloom. The dragging into the limelight of these horrible scandals is prophetic of better days. We are engaged vigorously in a National housecleaning.

"The old guard that so long has opposed the Governor's policies is in full retreat. It is remarkable that in a little more than a week the foes of political reform have met with four serious reverses. They are now striving to make the best terms that they can with the Governor's friends. They have been virtually crushed under the steam roller of the public demand for reform. The Governor is smiting his foes hip and thigh, and his support comes from the leading men of both parties. The bosses must take a back seat.

"This is the first time in the history of the State that either house of the Legislature has found one of its members guilty of a criminal act. It is a period of good political work, and a time for good cheer."

AMERICAN FAKIRS READY WITH EXHIBIT

Art Students' League Takes Off Pictures and Marbles of the National Academy.

MRS. H. P. WHITNEY A VICTIM

Her "Paganism Immortal" Becomes a Manicurist Busy with "A Pagan's" Hands—Lion Chained to Frame.

The nineteenth annual séance of the Society of American Fakirs will open for the entertainment of the public in the National Academy of Design Building, in West Fifty-seventh Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, this afternoon, and the promoters, the American painters and sculptors of the future, say there is every prospect that the show will eclipse any ever before given by the Fakirs of the past. The eighty-fifth annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design is going on now, and all the fakes that have been prepared by the younger artists and art students were inspired by the canvases or marbles displayed in the South, Centre, and Vanderbilt galleries on the first floor.

All of the Fakirs are students of the Art Students' League, and for weeks past these young men and women have been busy night and day getting ready for the séance, without which no National Academy exhibition would be complete. In addition to the exhibition of fake canvases there also will be the annual show, which this year is to be a psychic affair, and which is programmed as "New York's oldest amusement enterprise, a triumph of scenic supremacy and dazzling wonders."

All day yesterday the students were busy hanging their fakes and rehearsing their show. The fakes, as usual, will be displayed in the south room on the third floor. There will be hundreds of clever take-offs on the works of the famous artists on view two floors below. Paint, wool, wood, grease, iron, clay, in fact every material that possibly could be used in burlesquing, have been used in making the fakes, and there was a reason. That reason the art students solemnly announce is as follows:

"We do those who are well to do in order to do for those who are unable to do what they would like to do for themselves."

Every notable canvas, as well as most of the figures in marble and clay, are represented in the fake exhibit. Frederick J. Waugh's "Buccaneers," the winner of the Thomas S. Clarke prize for 1910, the highest of the Academy prizes, is the subject of at least a dozen fakes on the part of the students. The original of these fakes hangs in the most prominent place in the Vanderbilt Gallery. The canvas shows a pirate ship of the olden time riding at anchor at sea, while in the foreground is a sailing ship that the pirates have seized, the buccaneers being shown climbing over the side of the captured merchantman, cutting down the seamen of the sailer with their cutlasses.

"Buckin' for Beers" is the title of one of the fakes on Waugh's painting. In this picture appear a score of drunken sailors rolling about the deck of a sailing ship like the ship in the original, but there are no cutlasses and no gore anywhere. Everybody has a can of beer instead. Another of the "Buccaneers" fakes is called "The Fighting Suffragettes," and in this a crowd of lean-faced women, dressed in every imaginable garb is fighting out the much-discussed question of "votes for women."

Ernest L. Blumenschein's portrait of "A German Tragedian" is another canvas that found favor with many of the fakirs. Blumenschein's original shows a portly actor, with silk hat, glasses, and wearing the fur-collared overcoat that legend makes all of the old-time actors of note affect. There are more fakes of this canvas than of any other. In one of them, by Blumenschein, the actor is joyously intoxicated; in another he is standing on his head, and in another he has grown a beard and looks much the worse as a result of a supposed spree. In still another he is seated on a keg and between hiccoughs asks the question, "Vos iss lose mit Louie?"

A fake that attracts the attention of every visitor to the Fake Gallery is that of L. Luis Mora's "The Restaurant." The original shows a jolly crowd in a gilded restaurant at night. In the original everybody appears to be on his or her good behavior. In the fake it is announced that they are "all loaded for keeps," and they look it. With the exception of the men and women at the tables this fake looks more like the original than any other fake in the exhibit.

In the National Academy exhibit one of the finest of the animal paintings is W. H. Drake's "The Voice of the King." This shows the lion roaring his defiance. In the fake the lion is supposed to be roaring just as loud. But he is not dangerous in the fake, for his left front foot is chained to the frame with a real iron chain.

John W. Alexander's "The Tenth Muse" is one of the largest of the canvases in the Academy exhibit. In the fake exhibit it is called the "Tenth Nightmare," and shows a woman with vampire wings blowing flames into the face of a much-scared man. In the original Mr. Alexander himself is standing by the muse.

Charles Schreyvogel's "The Broken Column" is another large canvas, and shows a band of Indians breaking through a column of regulars. In the fake it is called "The Busted Colors," and shows everybody concerned on a spree. Among the marble sculptures is that of "Paganism Immortal," by Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. (Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.) The burlesque of Mrs. Whitney's figure is called the "Manicure Superb," and shows the manicure hard at work filing the nails of "a Pagan."

These are just a few of many fakes. There are hundreds of them, and it takes hours to study them all. They will be on exhibition from this afternoon, day and evening, until Friday. On Friday afternoon they will be auctioned off. All of the proceeds, including the twenty-five cents admission fee, are devoted to the Scholarship Fund of the Art Students' League, used to enable deserving students to continue their studies in the field of art.

Then there is the show, the first performance of which will be given this afternoon. Among those who are booked to appear are "Daisie Delirium, the Dainty Dancing Damsel"; "Tessie, the Human Gumdrop"; Señor Fromage de Brie, a marvel of strength," and "Midget, the smallest flea in the world."

UNDISTURBED BY "ELLIS" HOAX.

President Alexander Says the Hunting Picture Was Good Enough to Hang.

John W. Alexander, President of the National Academy of Design, was not disturbed by the publication yesterday morning of a story to the effect that Ivar Elis Evers, an artist, had sent to the academy a sizeable copy of a whole-page illustration in a folklore book, which had been hung. The book in question, it was said, was compiled by Dr. Moritz Wilhelm Gotthard Mueller, and the illustration was made from a painting by Herman Vogel.

Mr. Evers, it is said, named his copy of the picture book illustration "The Hunt Is Up," and sent it in under the name of "John Ellis." No one having discovered that it was a copy, he apparently revealed his deception himself.

"Oh, yes; the story has all the appearance of being true," said Mr. Alexander yesterday. "I am sure I don't know. There are a good many pictures there, and I have been out of town considerably on account of illness.

"I do not know the circumstances of this picture. I suppose it came in, was considered to be original, looked to be good enough for hanging, and so was hung. I haven't much to say about the incident or the artist."

FINDS GIRL AFTER 25 YEARS.

Daughter Lost in Babyhood to Return to Her Mother at Asbury Park.

After searching many years for her lost daughter who, she says, was kidnapped twenty-five years ago, Mrs. William A. Walton of Asbury Park, N. J., said last night that she had found her, and that she was now Mrs. Grace Loosley, 28 years old, of Englewood, Ill.

Mrs. Walton said that she had received a telegram from her daughter saying that she would come to Asbury Park at once, and that it was a great shock to her to learn that she was not the daughter of John Kugler of Murphysboro, Ill., in whose home she had lived since earliest childhood.

Mrs. Walton, whose husband is a contracting plumber, said that it was a Mrs. Elizabeth Gates who kidnapped the child. The Waltons suffered financial reverses at Mansfield, Ohio, in 1884, when their daughter Grace was two years old. They left her with Mrs. Gates until they could establish themselves elsewhere, they agreeing to pay a fixed rate for her food and clothing. When they tried to get her a little later they found that Mrs. Gates had disappeared, taking their daughter with her. A search has been kept up from that time until recently without success.

A month ago a journeyman plumber who obtained employment under Mr. Walton told him he had heard of a young girl being adopted from a Mrs. Gates by Mr. and Mrs. John Kughler of Sandusky, Ohio. Mrs. Walton wrote at once to the Chief of Police of Sandusky, with the result that the Kughlers were located in Murphysboro, and they gave the present address of their foster daughter, admitting that they had adopted her from the kidnapper.

SORORITY STUNTS HURT GIRL.

Initiation Ceremonies Into Bridgeport H. S. Society Make Her Seriously Ill.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 10.—Miss Lorraine Clark, a 14-year-old freshman of the High School here, is under treatment at a sanitarium in Brattleboro, Vt., as the result of her initiation on Feb. 8 into one of the school sororities.

According to her story she was made to drink a concoction, one of the ingredients of which was kerosene, and to eat macaroni which had be n boiled up with soap. She was then, she says, tossed in a blanket.

A few days after the initiation she began to feel the ill-effects of what she had eaten, but said nothing about it till some time in March, when she grew worse. Her father, F. C. Clark, a member of the State Legislature, then took her to Brattleboro for treatment. Her condition is believed to be serious.

The officials of the school refuse to make a statement concerning the matter, but it is understood that the Board of Education will make an investigation.

SEE HALLEY'S COMET AGAIN.

Washington Observers Catch It—Soon Visible to the Eye.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Halley's comet was seen here to-day for the first time, those favored with this primary view being Prof. Asaph Hall of the Naval Observatory and his assistant. It was about 4:30 o'clock in the morning when through the big twenty-six-inch telescope at the observatory they obtained a sight of the wanderer of the heavens which for the last three-quarters of a century has been hidden from the eyes of the inhabitants on this globe. For about fifteen minutes the comet remained visible.

In about three weeks, when the comet will be visible to the eye, it will rise two hours and forty minutes before the sun. To-day it came up an hour ahead of the great luminary. The comet, therefore, will be visible for a longer and longer period each day, although those who wish to see it will be obliged to arise early.

FOR THE ACTORS' FUND FAIR.

American Art Students in Paris to Send Portraits of Stage Folk.

For the exhibition and sale of paintings at the Actors' Fund Fair more than 100 American art students in Paris have sent over sketches of the theatre and persons connected with it, at the invitation of Miss Payson Graham, who has charge of the exhibition. Alexander, President of the American Academy of Design.

Another mass meeting of women of the stage and society will be held at the Gaiety Theatre to-morrow afternoon, for final reports on the work being done by the heads of the various departments. Mrs. Ida C. Nahm will preside, and in the gathering will be most of the well-known actresses now in New York.

A new feature of the fair, announced for the first time yesterday, will be a concert on the opening day of an orchestra and band of more than 100 pieces, under the direction of Max F. Schmidt, general orchestra leader for Klaw & Erlanger. The players will be gathered from the orchestras of the Klaw & Erlanger theatres and from the members of Mr. Max's White and Gold Band.

ORPHANS CELEBRATE ASYLUM'S JUBILEE

Friends Fill the Hippodrome to Cheer 1,200 Boys and Girls from Hebrew Institution.

MAYOR GUEST OF HONOR

Praises the Work Done by the School in Its Fifty Years of Life—Drills Win Applause.

More than 1,000 small inmates of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum shared the big stage of the Hippodrome last night with Mayor Gaynor. The 400 boys in their picturesque military uniforms fired volleys of blank cartridges at an audience of 5,000 well-wishers from real Springfield rifles. They gave all sorts of drum, fife, and bugle drills, and spread and repacked army tents all over the stage with lightning speed. As for the 500 little girls, they all looked so pretty with their white and yellow dresses and white hair ribbons that one wondered how the matrons of the asylum had ever been able to get them ready.

"Poor children! How I wish I could go up and mother every single one of them," exclaimed a matronly woman in the front row of the Hippodrome's audience, impetuously to her husband, as all the 1,200 orphans were singing a chorus from "Ernani."

"Think how much more they'd deserve to be called 'Poor children!' if it wasn't for the Hebrew Orphan Asylum," her escort responded with a laugh.

The singing, drills, and happy childish faces evidently made a considerable impression on Mayor Gaynor, who shared the honors with the orphans.

"It would be difficult to duplicate anywhere in the world. There couldn't be any finer example of what can be done for orphans than what we have seen to-night," the Mayor said.

When the Hippodrome's vast tapestried curtain rolled aside, at about 8:30 o'clock, the 1,200 boys and girls were seen standing full face to the audience. The boys were dressed in khaki suits and broad-brimmed gray felt hats like the fatigue uniform of the regular United States Army. Every one of the girls wore either a white or yellow dress and a broad white satin hair ribbon. As they started to sing "America," the audience of grown-up friends of the asylum, filling every seat in even the topmost gallery of the big playhouse, fairly went wild with applause.

One of the things that pleased the audience most was when the 1,200 orphans finished singing, and turning to leave the stage marched off through the different wings in separate squads, all in step and in the most orderly manner. There wasn't a bit of confusion, not a single flustered little girl or lad out of step anywhere.

Gov. Hughes's Tribute.

Then Louis Stern, the President of the Orphan Society, who had been sitting in the flag-draped right stage box with Mayor Gaynor, Jacob Schiff, Justice Newberger, Isaac Guggenheim, Controller Prendergast, and most of the city officials, climbed up on the stage. After welcoming the audience and explaining that the event was the Orphan Asylum's golden jubilee, President Stern read a letter from Gov. Hughes.

"I remember with much pleasure the day on which I visited the asylum and reviewed its cadet corps. Best wishes for continued prosperity," wrote the Governor.

After the reading of this letter the asylum's khakied drum, fife, and bugle corps gave a drill. Then the asylum's "Infant Drum Corps," twenty-five strong, came out in blue, gold-braided uniforms and showed the audience what they could do. As none of these twenty-five boys was over 9 years old or more than three feet in height the audience applauded again and again. Directed by a drum major, whose shako of black bear fur was almost as tall as its wearer, they went through their drum and fife exercises and did vigorous calesthenics like veterans.

After this the asylum's soldier boys marched on with their tents and rifles, and went through a businesslike drill which made the audience feel that these New York City orphans were going to make unusually valuable citizens some day if this country ever gets into a real war. After the 500 girls had sung their Ernani chorus Mayor Gaynor left his box and walked across the platform.

"While you are able to see me, I can't see you. I had no idea that the footlights were so strong," said Mayor Gaynor. "But I am certainly greatly edified by what I have been seeing from the box. The fifty years of this society's life have been rehearsed before me. As I looked on and heard the beautiful music I could not help saying that what it all meant was the society's history of fifty years.

"How many bereaved children you friends of the society have succored and saved during that time! Many of the children you have aided were bereaved so early in life that they did not even know the words 'mother' and 'father.' Yet you have subsequently sent them out of your institution creditable men and women. We must remember the old maxim: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'

"It was surprised but glad to learn to-night that the school which all your 1,200 children go to is one of the city's public schools, although this school is supported by the Board of Education so quietly in your institution that I never heard of it. I wish all the orphans in all the asylums of this city could go to public schools.

The First Jews of New York.

"There's a fallacious term I want to talk about. It's the term Christian charity. Charity existed among the Hebrews long before Christianity. Peter Stuyvesant, you remember, in old Dutch Colonial days, wouldn't let the first seven New York Jews of which history tells us, land in New York, until they gave a bond that they would take care of their own sick and poor. It is much to their credit of the descendants of those seven Jews that New York City has never had to dig that old bond up and bring suit for its enforcement. Thank God there are no bigots left.

"What we have seen to-night shows us that when the time comes all of us—Christian and Hebrew, young and old—will be found in the counsel of state and the field of battle. I believe this city is becoming more and more homogeneous every day. The sects and races are all getting closer and closer together. I believe that in less than 100 years the lines of demarcation will have become so close as scarcely to be discernible."

This last statement of Mayor Gaynor's was received with pronounced applause. A history of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum was then read by Edward Lauterbach and a silver loving cup was presented to the venerable Dr. Abram Jacobi, who for fifty years has been physician for the home. There were more exercises by the children and addresses by former inmates who have left the asylum and entered the city's business life.

Before the entertainment Mayor Gaynor dined with Mr. and Mrs. Stern at their home, 993 Fifth Avenue.

A SCHOOL MA'AMS REBELLION

Reported by Fred Thompson from Dansville, N. Y.—7 Want Chorus Jobs.

Comes Frederic Thompson, theatrical manager, and says that the entire feminine staff of teachers—numbering seven—of District School 48, situated at Dansville, Livingston County, N. Y., has decided to go on the stage. They have, according to a detailed account received from Mr. Thompson last night, written to ask him to give them a chance to enter the Temple of Histrionic Art through the medium of the chorus of Mr. Thompson's Summer show, which is to be presented on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre.

The application, according to Mr. Thompson's representative, covers six pages of regulation sized stationary, setting forth, in irreproachable English, the trials and tribulations of a school teacher's life in Livingston County, and the desire of the teachers concerned to "broaden their minds through contact with the bright lights of the theatrical profession." This aforesaid desire had its origin in the organization last Winter of a literary society which read on Saturday evenings the works of Bernard Shaw, Ibsen, and others. After a brief course it was certain that Dansville offered no opportunities for the growth of the individual and the stage did.

Mr. Thompson said by proxy last night that the proposal rather appealed to him. Miss Agnes Poker is the name offered for use as that of the President and ringleader of the disaffected school ma'ams. Mr. Thompson has written to her, it is said, for photographs of the seven.

A HAUPTMANN PLAY GIVEN.

Stella Hammerstein Well Received in "Lonely Lives" at the Hackett.

Gerhardt Hauptmann's five-act drama, "Lonely Lives," was presented at the Hackett Theatre last night under the direction of Frank Lea Short and Julius Hopp. The cheerful story it tells is of a man driven to suicide by the nagging of his parents and the jealousy of his wife.

Mr. Short played the part of the husband, Gilda Varesi had the rôle of the wife, and Stella Hammerstein, who gave a well-informed performance, had the part of the woman of whom the wife is jealous. The other principal characters were taken by Charles J. Harris, Adelle Leonard, Alfred Walsh, and John Hugh Fish.

Another performance under the auspices of the American Dramatic Guild will be given to-morrow afternoon.

IMPRESSIVE TRIBUTE TO C. SPRAGUE SMITH

People of Many Walks of Life Attend Funeral of People's Institute Leader.

ALL SOULS CHURCH FILLED

Prominent Men Act as Pallbearers—Body Placed in Receiving Vault at Woodlawn Cemetery.

Men and women in many stations of life and of many nationalities gathered yesterday afternoon in All Souls' Unitarian Church at the funeral of Charles Sprague Smith, late head of the People's Institute. Every side of Mr. Smith's busy life was represented, but chiefly his work for the people of Cooper Union. The Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of the church, who read the service, was an old friend of the deceased, and is a Director of the People's Institute, and most of the clubs founded throughout the city by Mr. Smith's influence sent some of their members.

The request had been made that flowers should be omitted, but several handsome wreaths were sent from the different organizations with which Mr. Smith was connected. The coffin was almost hidden by a mass of American Beauty roses and mignonette, and for a background was a bank of roses, lilies, carnations, and evergreens.

The pall bearers were Howard Mansfield, V. Everit Macy, Edward D. Page, John S. Huyler, Dr. William B. Clark, Dr. George M. Tuttle, Frank L. Babbotts, President Nicholas Murray Butler, Prof. John B. Clark, Franklin H. Sargent, Dr. Lyman A. Cheney, William H. Raiman, Herman Epstein, and Abraham Sigelstein. As the organist, Louis R. Dressler, played Beethoven's Funeral March they preceded Dr. Slicer to the west door to receive the body.

The chief mourners were Mrs. Charles Sprague Smith, Mr. Smith's widow; Miss Hilda Sprague Smith, his daughter; Mrs. Charles L. Smith, his mother; Edwin B. Smith, a brother; Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Cole, the latter a sister-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Seth Sprague Terry, his cousins, and Miss Louise Veltin.

When all were seated the Mendelssohn Quartet Club rendered "Inter Vitae" unaccompanied, and Dr. Slicer then read Scriptural promises holding out consolation to the mourners from the Epistle of St. Paul, Isaiah, the Psalms, and the Gospels, and then he read selections from Seneca, the Buddhist sacred writings, the Hindu Ramayana, Confucius, and Epictetus. He closed with a passage from Emerson and an extract from Robert Browning's Paracelsus.

"He Was a Father to the Humble."

The quartet sang a hymn composed by Mr. Smith's mother, "Tarry With Me, O My Saviour," and Dr. Slicer offered prayer. He asked that the mourners might be inspired to take part in the great achievements of the deceased and rendered thanks for one who had made others realize the existence of goodness by the goodness in himself.

Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," to music by Sir J. F. Bridge, organist of Westminster Abbey, then was rendered by the quartet, and Dr. Slicer, descending from the pulpit, took his stand behind the coffin. He read a passage from the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

By the desire of the family no conventional tribute was paid to the dead, but as Dr. Slicer pronounced the words written 4,000 years before Christ the tears of many showed they felt they applied directly to Mr. Smith. They were:

Then shall the judge of the dead answer: Let this soul pass on; for it was upon truth. He has made his delight in doing what is good to men, and what is pleasing to God.

He has given food to the hungry, drink to the thirsty, and clothes to the naked. His lips are pure and his hands are pure.

His heart weighs right in the balance. He fought on earth the battle of the gods, even as His Father, the Lord of the Invisible world, had commanded him.

O, God, the protector of him who brought his cry unto Thee, make it well for him in the world of spirits!

He loved his father, he honored his mother, he loved his brethren. He never preferred the great man to him of low condition.

He was a wise man, his soul loved God. He was a brother to the great and a father to the humble; and he never was a mischief-maker.

Such as these shall find grace in the eyes of the great God. They shall dwell in the abodes of glory, where the heavenly life is led.

The bodies which they have abandoned will repose forever in their tombs, while they will enjoy the presence of the great God.

Body Placed in Vault at Woodlawn.

With the singing by the quartet of the hymn, "Now, the Laborer's Task Is O'er," and a blessing by Dr. Slicer, the service ended. The coffin was borne out to the strains of Chopin's Funeral March. The body was taken to Woodlawn Cemetery, where it was laid in a receiving vault until the grave can be made ready.

Among those present were representatives of the class of '74 of Amherst, and of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, of which he was a member. Representing the fraternity were Joseph H. Choate, Talcott Williams, William Ives Washburn, District Attorney Charles H. Whitman, Collin Armstrong, the Rev. Joseph N. Blanchard, Benjamin W. Franklin, and William D. Leonard.

Of those closely associated with Mr. Smith's work were Michael M. Davis, Jr., Secretary of Club A; Miss Mary S. Pierson, President of the People's Club, 318 East Fiftieth Street, and the Rev. Francis J. Clay Moran. Jacob H. Schiff, Clarence J. Shearn, William J. Schieffelin, Borough President George McAneny, George R. Bishop, J. Aspinwall Hodge, President John H. Finley of the City College, Prof. Francis H. Stoddard of the New York University, John Collier, Charles R. Barkley, Robert Underwood Johnson, Julius Henry Cohen, and Julius Lehmaier also attended.

Let's understand each other now that Spring rains and raincoats are in order.

All raincoats are not "Cravenettes."

Many men call them so because the "Cravenette Process" has become the standard for rainproofing light and porous fabrics.

Mighty complimentary that to the "Cravenette Process," but misleading to the buyers of protection.

When we say that our raincoats are "Cravenettes" we mean exactly that—every yard of the goods carries the "Cravenette" label of the genuine Priestley Process.

They are the real thing.

Spring raincoats, $20 to $35.

GIANTS SHOW SPEED AGAINST "SKEETERS"

Jersey City an Easy Victim for New York Nationals by 6 to 1 Score.

Thawed out by the warm sun in Jersey City, the Giants got frisky against Jack Ryan's Eastern League team at West End Park yesterday, and in defeating the "Skeeters" by a 6 to 1 score McGraw's team showed several flashes of real midsummer baseball. While the New Yorks did not hit the ball very often, they fielded with speed and accuracy, and several times the fast work cut off the Jersey City players from making a showing. Once the New Yorks got a man on the bases he was rushed around the circuit, taking long chances on being tagged out, but in most cases the daring base galloping worked successfully.

Larry Doyle contributed the most spectacular performance in the ninth. He was the first man up, and hammered out a double between right and centre. With most of the Jersey City team looking at him Doyle trotted down to third, and when Becker hit an easy grounder Doyle started home and drew the play his way. Then Esmond, at third base, and Fisher, the home catcher, started to run Doyle up and down the base line. Larry was nearly tagged out two or three times, but he finally ran toward the plate, and with a long, low dive ducked under Fisher and was safe at home. Most of the 6,000 people stood up at this point and cheered Doyle until he left the diamond.

During the game not a New York player was left on the bases. Shafer and Doyle were a bit too daring at times, and each got caught off first. Bridwell at short seemed to cover an acre of ground, and he tossed the ball over to Merkle from all angles. Merkle played a good game at first and got everything, even a few balls which seemed to be out of reach. Ames and Crandall had the Jersey City batsmen at their mercy and in six innings Ames allowed but one hit, a smart grounder through short. He fanned six men, and only twenty men faced him in six innings. Crandall took up the task in the seventh and didn't allow a hit.

Jersey City's lonesome run came in the ninth. Clements hit a fly to right, which Murray galloped after. He got his hands on the ball, but dropped it, Clements going to second. Hanford then hit a grounder to Bridwell, who made his only error out of ten chances, Hanford going to third on the play. Mueller whacked a grounder to Bridwell, who picked it up on the end of his glove and forced Hanford out at second, but Hanford in the meantime scored. The score:

Pitcher Reulbach in Bad Shape.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 10.—The condition of E. J. Ruelbach, pitcher for the Chicago Nationals, who is ill with diphtheria at his home in this city, took a turn for the worse to-day, and his condition is considered serious by his physicians. He was given a second anti-toxin treatment this afternoon, the first treatment, given Saturday, failing to act satisfactorily. Reulbach's baby daughter, from whom he contracted the disease, also had a relapse last night, but now is thought to be out of danger.

YANKEES MEET DEFEAT.

Newark Wins Thirteen-Inning Game by Close Score of 3 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., April 10.—The Newark Eastern Leaguers took a fall out of the New York Americans here this afternoon, breaking up an evenly played game in the thirteenth and winning, 3 to 2. Mueller, who pitched the last eight innings for the locals, won his game with a hard smash through the box with one out, scoring Crisp, who had tripled.

Stallings sent his men into the fray behind Hughes, and later relied on Frill, last year's stand-by for Newark, to help put it over his former colleagues. The hill toppers went to work with a recollection of a trouncing they got in the same park a year ago, but they had nothing on Joe McGinnity's braves when it came time to fight.

Things opened with a rush by the visitors in the second, when Foster, recruited from Jersey City, tripled to deep left. Austin fouled to Zimmerman, but when Sweeney slammed one to Gettman, Foster hotfooted it for home. Austen scored in the fourth after his single, and one by Sweeney. Gettman muffed Hemphill's fly.

Newark got its first run across in the fifth, when Crisp got four wide ones and scored on a double by Kelly, who batted for McGinnity. The locals evened matters up in the seventh. Crisp doubled and took third when Mueller was put out by Gardner making one of his sensational one-hand stops behind second base, throwing to first while he was off his feet. Meyer beat an infield hit, and after Ganley popped to Foster, Schlafly laid one down which he beat as Crisp crossed the plate. Until the thirteenth the game was nip and tuck. The score:

YANKEES PLAY PRINCETON.

Manager Stallings and His Promising Bunch to Get a Welcome Home To-day.

The Highlanders will make their first home appearance after the six weeks' training trip in Georgia, at the American League Park this afternoon, when they will play Princeton. The game will commence at 4 o'clock, and there will probably be a big collection of fans out to welcome the Yankees home. This year's Princeton team has made a good showing in its early games, and the Highlanders' homecoming will probably be the occasion of a good game.

The Giants will also be seen at the Polo Grounds this afternoon, their opponents being the Jersey City team of the Eastern League. This game is scheduled to begin at 3:30 o'clock. On Wednesday Joe McGinnity's Newark team will oppose the Giants at the Polo Grounds. Tuesday will see Charley Dooley's Utica team of the New York State League at American League Park opposing the Highlanders. Great preparations are being made for the opening of the season at American League Park on Thursday, when the Highlanders will meet the Boston Red Sox in the first league game of the season. The occasion will be attended by appropriate ceremonies.

Both New York teams will take this evening off and attend the theatre. The Highlanders will be guests at an "opening welcome" party at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, where there will be fitting decorations in the boxes and fitting songs and jokes on the stage. At Wallack's the Giants will be guests at the performance of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and see how H. B. Warner cracks safes.

Yale Calls for Baseball Candidates.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 10.—A second general call for Yale baseball candidates has been issued. The nine has slumped badly since the Easter trip, and its showing yesterday against the Giants on the Polo Grounds was the poorest made by the Yale team in years. It is practically unknown for more than one call for candidates to be issued, but the poor showing of the team has made one necessary midseason. It is proposed to train the squad who will report to-morrow separately from the 'Varsity nine. Coach Lush was away part of last week because of death in his family. The most extensive shake-up since the season opened is expected this week.

Morrow, Old Baseball President, Dies.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 10.—John Morrow, a racing judge on tracks throughout the West and on the Canadian circuit, died here to-day, aged 62 years. He had been ill for some time. Mr. Morrow was one of the first Presidents of the Southern Baseball League.

FIRST ACCIDENT AT MOTORDROME

Hanshue and Mechanician Have Lucky Escape at Los Angeles Auto Meet.

PLAYA DEL REY, Cal., April 10.—The first accident of the Motordrome meet occurred this afternoon in the fifty-mile race when the Apperson (Jack Rabbit) car upturned and rolled over several times. Harris Hanshue, the driver, and Carey King, his mechanician, escaped with nothing more serious than severe bruises and a shaking up.

The accident, which was caused by a broken tire, was one of the most spectacular ever seen on a motor track. Four cars had started in the fifty-mile race. A broken valve spring had eliminated Barney Oldfield's Knox. Marquis in the Isotta had taken the lead, closely followed by Hanshue. A bad tire had cost Livingston's Stoddard-Dayton five miles. Hanshue was chasing the Isotta while Livingston was trying hard to pass the Apperson. The Apperson and Stoddard swept by the stand like a flash, side by side.

A hundred yards beyond the judge's stand the Apperson's right rear tire went off and the car swerved. Livingston went high on the bank to safety. The Apperson turned suddenly to the left and shot off the track. The momentum was too great for the car to be straightened quickly, and when the wheels on the right suddenly collapsed the car rolled over four times. Hanshue was pinned under the steering wheel and did not fall out until the car had turned over twice.

As the machine rose in the air, King was thrown ahead fifty feet. He then rolled along the ground like a log, the car rolling over repeatedly a few yards behind him. The men were unconscious when picked up and taken to the hospital tent, but they soon recovered, and an examination did not show any broken bones. The car was wrecked.

A new record was established in this race by the Isotta, which finished in 89:20:60. The best previous mark by a car in this class was 42:02.98, made at Atlanta by Robertson in a Fiat. The competitive five-mile record also was broken by Harroun in a Marmon, in the race for cars of the 231-300 class.

Fully 12,000 persons crowded the stands and infield. Motor cars and spectators lined the course around the infield fence. In the record trials Oldfield in his Benz made the fastest mile, 36.90.

The five-mile free-for-all was a fight. Three cars started—Bragg, in a Fiat; Robertson, in a Simplex, and Kerscher, in a Darraeq. Kerscher had the speed, but his car would not hold to the track, and he gave up the lead after holding it one mile. Then Robertson took command, but in the fourth mile Bragg, an amateur, shot around the outside and won by several open lengths. The time, 3:15.80, is a new record. Summary:

Time Trials; One Mile.—Bragg, (Fiat,) 88:52; Oldfield, (Benz,) 36:90.

Three Miles.—Robertson, (Simplex,) 1:58:90.

Four Miles.—Kerscher, (Darraeq,) 2:40.76.

Five Miles.—De Palma, (Fiat,) 3:40.27.

Fifteen-Mile Stock Chassis, Class C, 160 Cubic Inches.—De Palma, (Fiat,) won; Marquis, (Isotta,) second; Kelly, (Hupmobile,) third. Time—17:07:81.

Chandler and Lyon Handicap, Five Miles.—Lescault, (Palmer-Singer,) one minute, won; Livingston, (Stoddard-Dayton,) 85 seconds, second; Marquis, (Isotta,) one minute, third. Time—3:23.16.

LEWIS READY FOR START.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 10.—Dal H. Lewis, scout for the official pathfinding car of the Glidden automobile tour, arrived here to-day. He was informed that the start of the pathfinder, scheduled to take place to-morrow morning, would have to be delayed until Tuesday morning, owing to the inability of the Cincinnati Automobile Club, under whose auspices the start is to be made, to get things in readiness.

David H. Beecroft of the Chicago Automobile Club also arrived to-day, and will oversee the start. It was unofficially announced to-night that the first stop of the Glidden pathfinder will be at Lexington, Ky.

RAINES WINS "PRO" RACE.

Has Lead of a Lap in 20-Mile Run at Celtic Park.

Al Raines showed to good advantage yesterday when he took first place in the twenty-mile professional race at Celtic Park in the good time of 2:03:25. Pat Dineen crossed the line in second position, a lap behind Raines, his time being 2:04:52. Third position was given to Matt Maloney, but there was a protest lodged by Pat White, who claimed that he was ahead of Maloney and that the scorers had made a mistake. It was not allowed, however, and White had to be content with fourth place. The time made by the two was: Maloney, 2:09:17, and White, 2:10:41 3-5. Jimmy Lee was the last to finish in the money, and was credited with 2:15:36 2-5. The winner's time was considered particularly fast in view of the hard wind that blew down the back stretch.

During the early stages of the event it looked as if Lee would be able to distance the eleven who started. The former Mercury A. C. athlete, following his usual custom, cut lose with a fast clip, and before any great distance had been covered he had pulled into a lead of half a lap. By the time the three-mile post had been reached he had gathered a greater advantage, and Feeney dropped out of the race just beyond, unable to stay with the leaders. For ten miles of the journey Lee raced ahead of his rivals, but it became evident two miles before that he had shot his bolt, and gradually he was coming back.

When the tenth mile had been passed Raines, who was running in second position for the greater part of the way, was but a few yards behind the leader, and at ten miles and one lap Raines passed Lee, who was running in apparent distress. White held third position a considerable distance back.

At fifteen and a half miles White had supplanted Lee in second position, and the order was Raines, White, Lee, and Dineen. The latter had been running well back up to this point, but with the last quarter of the distance to be run, he commenced to creep up on the leaders, and by eighteen miles he had taken second place from White. He was running as strong as any man on the track, and tried hard to pull up on Raines, who was leading by a lap at this point. The two kept together, however, Raines not allowing Dineen to get away from him. During the nineteenth mile Maloney was credited with coming into third position, but there seemed to be considerable doubt on this point among the spectators.

IRISH-AMERICAN A. C. GAMES.

Boxing and Wrestling Bouts to be Held in New Club House.

Members of the Irish-American Athletic Club are enthusiastic over the new clubhouse, 110 and 112 East Fifty-ninth Street. More than 400 members inspected the building yesterday, and a special meeting was held in the assembly room. President Patrick J. Conway was in the chair, and the speakers included Alexander O'Rourke, Massachusetts; Police Inspector James Dillon, and Father Murray. Among the clubs represented at the meeting were the Catholic Club, Y. M. C. A., Clan-na-Gaels, Hibernians, and the Irish societies of Boston and New Haven.

It was announced that during the past month more than 300 new members have been admitted to the club, and promises have been received from at least 1,000 more. Several offers of $100 were received toward a furnishing fund for the new clubhouse, but it was decided not to accept subscriptions, as it is expected that a big sum will be raised by the ball at Terrace Garden, April 25.

One of the features of the new clubhouse will be the wrestling and boxing bouts. Smokers will be held monthly and boxing entertainments every two weeks. It is intended to materially add to the present social features of the club as the restricted room at the present clubhouse made it impossible to hold entertainments.

The postponed club games will be held Sunday at Celtic Park, when a team will be selected for the junior championships.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 10.—The annual indoor meet of the Pittsburg Athletic Club last night did not complete its programme until after midnight. The University of Pittsburg won the Western Pennsylvania College championship relay.

The match relay race, one mile, was won by Chicago A. A. on a foul. The New York A. C. team was second. Time—3:38 1-5. A foul was alleged to have been committed by Gissing of New York on French of Chicago.

The sixty-yard high hurdle was won by Haikens of New York A. C.; Barney of Cleveland second. Time—0:8 2-5.

The half-mile handicap was won by Haywood, New York A. C.; Wolthers, New York A. C., second. Time—2:03. The second race, half-mile handicap, was won by Mahoney of Cleveland; Gissing of New York A. C., second, and Frick, New York A. C., third. Time—2:01.

HAUGHTON RETAINED AS HARVARD COACH

Crimson Athletic Association Closes Contract for Three Years — Starts Practice To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 10.—Final arrangements have been made between Percy D. Haughton and the Harvard Athletic Association, represented by William F. Garcelon, graduate Treasurer of the association, whereby Haughton will coach Harvard for the years 1910, 1911, and 1912. The money consideration was not given out. Haughton will start his duties to-morrow, directing the squad in its Spring practice.

This will be Haughton's third season with the eleven, having defeated Yale his first 4 to 0 and going down under the Blue last year 8 to 0. Haughton, who is 33 years old, is a Boston boy, and is employed by the City Trust Company of that city. He entered Harvard in 1895, having prepared at Groton. He represented the Crimson for four years on the gridiron and diamond, Captaining his nine in his graduation year. He was at that time considered the best all-around kicker Harvard had ever turned out. On leaving college he succeeded "Ma" Newell as coach of the Cornell football eleven and stayed with the Ithacans for two seasons, enabling them in his last year to defeat Princeton 12 to 0. Following Joshua Crane at Cambridge, he found an illy assorted, imperfectly drilled squad of men awaiting his hand, and in one short year he welded them into one of the best elevens that ever represented the college beyond the Charles. Haughton is a likeable chap, and one of the jolliest of good fellows toward his men off the field, but once let his feet touch the Stadium greensward and he becomes the hard and obdurate taskmaster. He has one weakness, a wholesome dread of newspaper men. He never gives a personal interview. Of the sixteen men who faced Yale last November but five have graduated, while the second team will furnish some extra good candidates, as will also the class of 1913.

WESTON TALKS TO NEWSBOYS

Spends Sunday in Toledo Lecturing and Launching Political Boom.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, April 10.—Urging the boys to start right and live a clean life, and incidentally launching a boom for Mayor Brand Whitlock as Governor of Ohio, Edward Payson Weston gave an interesting address to the newsboys of Toledo and several thousand citizens this afternoon. Weston told of walking extra miles in order to reach Toledo on Sunday.

Weston then related his promise to his mother forty years ago that he would not carry on his walking contests on Sunday. This he had kept when it would have meant thousands of dollars in his pockets to have walked on that day. He told of how he could make $100 a day by walking on Sunday on his present trip, but he refuses to do it. He also related an attempt to bribe him on his first walk across the United States. A gambler had offered him a large sum of money to fall behind his schedule, but he had refused.

"And now," he said, "the three men who were at the bottom of the scheme in Chicago are all dead, having met violent deaths, and I am still alive and walking. It only demonstrates the point I am desirous to bring out before you boys, that a man can be an athlete without selling his soul and manhood to gamblers."

He also referred to an attempt to bribe him to walk on Sunday in France years ago, but he had refused to accept it, although it would have made him $7,500 richer.

Weston was up early this morning, greatly refreshed from his strenuous walk of 63 miles Saturday. He ate a hearty dinner at noon, and visited Mayor Whitlock and Chief of Police Knapp. Fifteen days ahead of his schedule, Weston will leave Toledo on his way to New York at 12:05 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Many people have an erroneous impression of a "liquor cure." They fear a "hospital," with burly attendants, isolation, possible rough handling, and unpleasant notoriety. They find here, instead, comfortable surroundings, trained nursing, expert medical attention, and the same privacy they would have in their own homes. They can, if they wish, keep in constant personal touch with friends or business. A call at our Institute will verify these statements and involve for the inquirer no obligation and no publicity.

$10,000 Cars for $1,750

LAST year when $1,750 BUICK STOCK CARS, competing under the stock car rules of the American Automobile Association, established more World's Speed and Endurance Records than all other makes combined, some automobile dealers and owners said: "BUICKS entered in contests are not stock cars; they cost $10,000 each."

THIS year, when $1,750 BUICK STOCK DEMONSTRATING CARS cause other demonstrators to leave the hills and speedways, some automobile dealers and owners repeat the cry—"Buicks used for demonstrating purposes are not stock cars; they cost $10,000 each."

WE sold the 1909 Racing Cars with their enviable pedigrees, world's records and all, for $1,750. We will gladly sell any demonstrating cars we have at any time for the list price. We never ask a customer to take delivery of a car until we prove to his entire satisfaction that his purchase is the equal in every way of any machine in which he may have had a demonstration.

THE fact that automobile dealers and owners (the two principals best qualified to judge) think our $1,750 BUICKS perform like $10,000 cars is, we believe, the most flattering tribute to BUICK MERIT that could be paid.

A DEMONSTRATION over Fort George Hill and the BUICK ROUTE ON HIGH GEAR will show you why the $1,750 BUICK is classed as A $10,000 CAR.

with the control on the left-hand side

One of the smaller reasons—but a mighty good one—for choosing the Reo is that the driver's seat is on the left-hand side of the car.

That's where it ought to be.

You are driving along a street and want to stop somewhere. You don't want to turn around—besides, laws are constantly being passed compelling automobiles to stop at the right-hand curb. You don't want to climb over the levers and extra tire. You don't want to get out on the muddy side of the car.

Neither does the other front-seat passenger.

The left-hand drive avoids all this difficulty. Easy to get out—for both passenger and driver.

Every detail of the Reo is thought out in this same careful way. Every cent counts for genuine service.

Come let us show you the practical value of the left-hand drive and the thoroughbred qualities of the Reo.

SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON, ENGLAND.

Overlooking the River Thames and Embankment Gardens.

THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS HOTEL DE LUXE

A WORD TO THE WISE

THERE are no people on the face of the earth who know what they want and, it may be added, who know how to get it, better than the citizens of the United States.

It is not too much to say that they have revolutionized hotel life in every civilized country. Comparatively speaking it was but a few years ago when bathrooms in hotels were almost as rare as the dodo.

Elevators were few and far between.

Central heating was unknown.

In these and many other ways visitors to Europe from the United States have set up a new standard of comfort and have only given their valued patronage where their wishes are recognized.

One of the best known hotels of the world to appreciate this and to thoroughly keep abreast of the times has been the Savoy of London, England, which has been recompensed by attracting so many welcomed guests from the United States that they formed in 1909 nearly one-half of the total visitors of the hotel for the whole year.

Look down the arrival list of the Savoy and you will see the names of the most cultivated citizens from every State of the Republic, who know what they want and get it at The Savoy, or the hotel could never have become what it is—the centre of all the social and business life of the traveling public who leave New York.

Stand in the hall of The Savoy on any morning, and you will meet, from the United States, judges, senators, bankers, counsel, and men distinguished in Art, Literature and Drama, with their wives and families.

And thus it has come to pass that the word "SAVOY" as applied to an hotel is synonymous with the highest comfort and moderate prices. The word "SAVOY," moreover, is so universally recognized as entitled to this interpretation that hotels in many large cities in Europe, Asia and Africa have copied the name which stands in such high repute.

And how has that high repute been gained and conserved? Not by the use of any magic wand, but simply by attending to details and supplying THE BEST!

When the directors of The Savoy realize that an improvement is desirable money does not stand in the way. A few years ago five million dollars were spent on improvements and additions. The reward has come in the great accession of business. The hotel is always full of contented and applauding guests.

It is not sufficient for The Savoy to have "no complaints." The hotel lives upon the praise of its guests and their recommendations.

Bonds of Demonstrated Value

Broadly speaking, the prices commanded by bonds are determined by the following considerations:

1. Intrinsic value of the security.
2. Earning power of the property.
3. Character of the management.
4. Extent of the market.

Our Circular No. 823 describes several bond issues secured upon properties of demonstrated value and earning power. The management is, in all cases, experienced and competent. The bonds have a good market. They have been purchased by banks and well-informed investors. The income yield ranges from about 4½ to 5¼ per cent. In our opinion, this is as high a return as is now obtainable from bonds combining all of these important features.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

The gold export movement was continued early last week on a scale which promised quickly to carry the amount of gold exports beyond the estimate of $20,000,000 named at the outset of the movement as the probable extent of London's demands for gold upon this centre. The fact, however, that the Bank of England, despite a very poor weekly statement, did not feel called upon to advance its minimum rate of discount beyond the 4 per cent. rate fixed on March 17, and that our own interest rates in response to the gold demand rose both in the call and time loan departments, served to check for the moment the outflow of gold, and thus the total exports for the week, although amounting to $5,650,000, did not reach as large a sum as was expected in the early days of the week. In addition $2,500,000 was engaged on Saturday for shipment next Wednesday. The logic of the situation has for so long pointed toward a substantial export movement of gold that it can hardly be expected that the moderate rise which has taken place during the last few days in our interest rates will be sufficient to postpone for long further shipments of gold. The position in which the London money market finds itself at the moment is only one of the factors bearing on this gold movement, and whatever may be the changes during the next few days in the position of the London money market with special reference to the reserve position of the Bank of England, the fact will remain that in our transactions, commercial and financial, with Europe we are heavily indebted to foreign countries.

While a rise in interest rates accompanied by enhancement in the yield on investments would undoubtedly help to attract foreign investments in this country, it is not probable that the fractional advances in our interest rates last week are of sufficient influence to bring about such a readjustment of our position in the international exchanges as to preclude a further loss of gold at this time. The reasonableness of the efforts which the Bank of England has put forth to attract gold from this market in the shape of the premium bid by the Bank on American gold coin was clearly enough shown in the character of the statement which the Bank issued on Thursday last. It showed the lowest percentage of reserve reported at this date in any year since 1899, the proportion of reserve falling below 40 for the first time at this date in this period of more than ten years. In eight years out of the last twelve the Bank has shown a gain in the proportion of reserve in the second week of April, whereas on this occasion the change for the week was a decline of 5¼ in the percentage of reserve. In this connection, however, it is worthy of note that exports of $4,000,000 gold to South America early in the week contributed to the poor showing made by the Bank of England. About twice this amount has been secured for the Bank in New York, but none of it, of course, had arrived in London in time to figure in last week's statement. The fact that the Bank of England did not advance its discount rate despite the low state of its reserve, and that the chances favor a strengthening of this reserve before next Thursday by the gold arrivals from New York, suggest that the present rate of 4 per cent. may prove sufficient to accomplish the Bank's purposes. It does not appear, however, that any changes of sufficient importance have yet taken place in the London money market to preclude the possibility, recently quite frankly suggested, that the rate would be advanced even to 5 per cent. if necessary to attract gold from New York. The fact, however, that the Bank chose to bid a considerable premium on American gold coin suggests that this method rather than a further advance in the Bank's discount rate will be followed in further efforts which the Bank of England is quite sure to make to strengthen its reserves.

From a minimum rate of 1 per cent., the lowest recorded since the last week in April, 1909, the call money rate rose last week to 4 per cent., the highest reported since the third week in January last. Coincidentally, time money rates advanced about one-quarter. Both these movements were a natural reflection of the demands made upon the cash supplies of the banks. It was but natural that some such effect should be produced by the withdrawal during the first half of the week of an amount of gold in excess of the surplus reserve reported by the Clearing House banks the previous Saturday. Thanks to a decrease of over $25,000,000 in deposits and to the fact that the banks' other cash transactions slightly reduced the loss by gold exports, the bank statement at the close of the week showed an increase of $1,538,000 in the actual surplus of the Clearing House banks. This brings the surplus up to $6,881,000, compared with $10,484,000 at the corresponding date a year ago.

In addition to the monetary position here and abroad, the financial markets had presented to their attention last week the Government's crop report and the monthly record of the country's copper and iron production. The crop figures, while revealing considerable deterioration from the December figures, do not fully bear out the predictions of damage to the Winter wheat crop which were made in many private estimates. Early in the week reports were submitted by several of the Winter wheat States which suggested that previous estimates of damage had been exaggerated. When the Government crop report was issued on Friday it showed a condition of Winter wheat on April 1 of 80.8, compared with 95.8 on Dec. 1, 1909. The condition on April 1 last year was 82.2, and the year before 91.3. The fact that this year's acreage of Winter wheat is larger than last year's and that since the Government crop report was made up needed rains have been had in extensive sections of the Winter wheat area afford ground for the assertion that the present outlook for the Winter wheat crop is by no means as unfavorable as was suggested in some recent estimates. Following the publication of the State reports early in the week and in anticipation of the Government report to be published on Friday the price of wheat showed a declining tendency, although followed by some recovery later. The promise on the April 1 showing is for a Winter wheat crop of 435,000,000 bushels, which is not much below the actual crop of last year or the year before.

The country's pig iron output during the month of March amounted to 2,615,261 tons, which exceeds any previous monthly record with the exception of last December. The daily rate of production, however, was slightly lower than during the short month of February, the daily average output in March being 84,363 tons, compared with 85,616 tons in February. In December last the daily average production was 85,022 tons. An interesting feature of the month's showing was that the daily average production, compared with February, of the iron produced by furnaces operated in connection with steel works showed a reduction, while there was an actual increase in the daily production of merchant furnaces. The March copper figures showed an increase of over 16,600,000 pounds in the stocks of copper on April 1, compared with the stocks of March 1, making a total increase of over 25,000,000 pounds in the stocks of copper between Feb. 1 and April 1.

The stocks of the metal on April 1 were still about 18,000,000 pounds under the stocks at the beginning of the year, but the increased rate at which the stocks were enlarged during March as compared with February was an unfavorable tendency. The March production of copper was a little in excess of 120,000,000 pounds, and the total deliveries in excess of 163,403,000 pounds of which 40,500,000 pounds were taken for export. The stocks on April 1 amounted to 123,824,874 pounds.

The stock market itself, left as it was almost entirely in the hands of traders who were principally engaged in matching forces with each other, presented a record of less than usual interest despite fairly large price changes on some days of the week. Dullness increased as the week advanced, and at times trading came practically to a standstill until Friday, when there was some increase in the trading. That the movements in prices were not in any direct way related to the week's developments is clearly enough shown by such incidents as the sharp advance in prices on Thursday afternoon following the announcement of the engagement of over $5,000,000 gold for export.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE.

BERLIN BOERSE NERVOUS.

Fear of Tighter Money and a Strike Affect Speculation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 10.—Fears of tighter money, due to an expected rise in the Bank of England discount rate, were the dominating feature of the market last week. Other factors, including a prospective strike in the German building trades and unfavorable American crop reports, helped to give the Boerse a visibly nervous aspect.

Speculation was almost at a standstill and prices were dull.

RUBBER RULES IN LONDON,

But Oil Companies Are Pushing It Hard for Speculative Lead.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 10.—Rubber speculation is still paramount, with the newly promoted oil companies striving hard to attract an equal amount of public attention. Moreover the increased dividend to the proprietors of the Stock Exchange and the advance in the price of nominations to membership testify to halcyon times in Capel Court.

Gold shipments from New York helped to relieve the money market, but it is doubted here whether much more can be spared from your side, and with the Bank of England reserve more than £5,000,000 lower than at this period last year the outlook is considered somewhat threatening.

PARIS PRICES UNDECIDED.

Affected by Tightening of Money Market at Other Centres.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 10.—Prices on the Bourse showed considerable indecision during the week, chiefly owing to the tightening of the money market at other centres and the fear of a new increase in the discount rate in London. The general price level, however, was very little lower than that of the previous week.

Copper stocks were rather dull, Rio Tinto receding to 1920. State funds were firm, with the exception of Russians, which were somewhat irregular. Russian industrials were exceedingly quiet.

RAILROADS ARE THE BEST STEEL BUYERS

Equipment Orders Are the Mainstay of the Lagging Industry.

NOT BUYING STEEL RAILS

Big Docks, Steel Viaducts and Bridges, and Thousands of Steel Cars Make Up the Calls of the Roads on the Mills.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 10.—Notwithstanding all the talk of hesitancy in buying by the railroads of the country, these same railroads are proving the mainstay of the steel trade this Spring. Car companies in this district have increased their requirements on the mills for plates and plain material for the second quarter; railroad buying of bar iron has been heavy for two weeks; the manufacturers of structural material find a larger part of their second quarter output taken up in shapes for steel underframe cars to be built by the railroads at their own shops; and two-thirds of the structural work now pending in Ohio and the Central States is for bridge, viaduct, and elevated track work for the railroads. The largest new inquiry for steel came from Lorain, Ohio, where the Baltimore & Ohio has just let the general contract for a million-dollar dock. The Carnegie Steel Company sold a larger tonnage of steel ties during the quarter ending with last month than in any similar period in three years.

In rails alone, demand is not increasing with the coming season, indicating that, instead of planning extensions, the railroads will spend the money during the present year in buying and building new equipment and in rehabilitating facilites that are run down after two years of penurious adminstration.

The orders of the Burlington, the New York Central, and the Chesapeake & Ohio for the week approached 3,800 cars, with scattering orders for 500 more from smaller roads. Western roads have additional inquiries in the market for upward of 4,500 cars. In structural lines the Big Four shops contract at Indianapolis, involving 8,000 tons of steel, has been let to a Pittsburg independent interest. The Big Four put out specifications during the week on two viaducts near Cincinnati, requiring 8,000 tons of steel, and lettings pending by the Baltimore & Ohio, the Toledo & Ohio Central, and the Chesapeake cations from the Panama Canal Commission for the steel work for the locks along the canal, which are expected to be placed in the hands of manufacturers within a week. The new locks will require 58,000 tons of steel plates and plain rolled material, making the larger single contract for steel plates ever let. The bids on the steel probably will go in within a month. Shading of prices in plates and in all lines of sheets has about ceased, though the wire trade and merchant pipe still are feeling the effects of the dull Winter. In pipe the demand is so sluggish that production is being curtailed. The Lorain, Ohio, plant of the National Tube Company, which shut down April 1, is to resume in part tomorrow, though the butt-weld department, which is one-third the capacity of the plant, will remain idle for the present.

The movement of pig iron prices for the week proved a disappointment to those producers who looked for the revival of demand to bring with it higher prices. With the stocks now piled in Pittsburg district, it would take almost an unheard of influx of new business to bring higher price levels. Foundry iron, though in good demand all week, showed a tendency to drop below $15.75, as against $16 the first of the month. Two sales of prompt No. 2 foundry iron were made at a shade under $15.25, furnace, for No. 2, and one lot of 3,000 tons for second quarter shipment sold at a flat price of $15.75, furnace. Several blocks of resale basic were available at $16, valleys, and producers who are still holding out for $16.25 for basic are practically out of the market. One sale for third quarter, 4,000 tons, was made at that figure, but there were special conditions attached to this transaction.

Bessemer iron has established itself at $17.50, valleys, or of $18.40, Pittsburg, for any delivery through second and third quarters. This is the first definite price level Bessemer has made for itself since it dropped below $18, valleys, early in March. Three sales of Bessemer, aggregating 5,500 tons, all to Eastern steel companies, were made at $17.50. All were for deliveries during the current quarter, but producers in this market would duplicate the price for third-quarter deliveries, notwithstanding the fact that the new prices of Lake Superior ores, involving a horizontal advance of 50 cents, go into effect April 25. This increase in the cost of the ore will be somewhat counterbalanced by the expiration of numerous high-priced contracts on coke for first half, made when Connellsville furnace coke was at $2.70 to $2.90, which are now being renewed at $2.10 and $2.20.

On several sales, malleable iron held firm at $16, valleys. Over 2,000 tons of forge iron sold at $15.25, valleys, and a shade lower. The week closed with small inquiries pending for the steel-making grades of iron, but considerable movement in prospect in foundry grades.

The car shortage, which became acute during the first days of the miners' strike, has abated, and shipments on running contracts in pig iron and crude steel are very heavy. The troubles of the coal operators have produced no bad effects on the steel trade. Operators are offering coal, which had been stocked at the mines in anticipation of a suspension of operations, at about previous prices. The only exception is slack, which has risen from $1.10 to $1.20. Run-of-mine and three-quarter nut are offered at $1.25, the price prevailing before the mines closed. The demand for spot Connellsville coke increased slightly, as a result of a shortage in other coke fields, where the miners are idle, but the new demand was not sufficient to absorb the surplus coke stocked at the ovens in the Connellsville region. About 20,000 tons of coke have been going into stocks in the Connellsville region every week since Feb. 1. Spot

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 10.—Few in the copper world—at least in this part of it—but have been interested in the mill runs of the Lake Copper Company which have been reported to the public this week. Apprehension regarding the property has been aroused by the returns, and the declining price of the stock has reflected this apprehension.

The first run, made Nov. 10, 1909, showed a yield of 80 pounds of mineral per ton of rock; the March, 1910, run yielded 28 pounds. Estimating the copper contents at 74 per cent., the decrease was from 59.2 to 20.7.

President Dow of the North Lake and Indiana Companies, whose property adjoins the Lake property, goes on record as predicting: "When larger openings have been provided and a judicious selection is made of the rock broken—and all of the amygdaloid mines at Lake Superior are obliged to select to a greater or less extent—Lake will prove to be at least a thirty-pound ingot proposition. I believe that when the mine is able to supply 100 tons of rock daily it will be able to show this recovery, and that it will be able to exhibit the lowest operating costs at Lake Superior."

"In other words, if copper is selling at 13 cents," Mr. Dow says, "I believe Lake will ultimately be able to show a cost of $1.30 per ton, so that there should be in time a profit of twenty pounds of copper from every ton of vein matter sent to the stamp mill."

A showing of twenty-eight pounds of mineral per ton compares favorably with other Lake Superior mines, and if with ordinary selection and the inclusion of the mass and barrel copper the rock averages twenty-seven or twenty-eight pounds of copper to the ton, only Calumet & Hecla will compare with the Lake.

The election of Quincy A. Shaw to the vacant Presidency of Calumet & Hecla seems to insure a continuation of the Agassiz policies. Mr. Shaw's forte is his technical knowledge of mining. For fifteen years he has not failed to visit the property twice every year, familiarizing himself with every detail.

Bohemia's diamond drill, on its way to No. 1 Adventure lode, passed through a good amygdaloid lode at a depth of 395 feet.

South Lake's second diamond drill has reached the 1,600-foot mark and is expected to find the Lake lode in another 250 feet.

Considerable interest is taken in the developments at Oneco, where drill No. 6 is nearing the lode.

The annual report of Calumet & Arizona shows a loss of surplus of about $270,000 compared with 1908.

Superior & Pittsburg is shipping about 17,500 tons of 5@7 per cent. ore monthly. The mines are capable of turning out 25,000,000 pounds of copper per year at a cost of about 9 cents.

Nevada Consolidated produced between 5,500,000 and 6,000,000 pounds of copper during March. Improvements now under way will increase the capacity of the property to 75,000,000 pounds per annum.

Utah Copper in March produced 8,100,000 pounds of copper, showing an estimated profit of $400,000 for the month.

The estimated profit of Nevada-Douglas on its smelting contract is $1,250,000.

The new mill at Chino is to have a capacity of 3,000 tons.

President Turner of Ely Central is very optimistic in his annual report.

There is an excellent showing of ore in the Eureka shaft, described as "both

This report is of especial interest to holders of the bonds of New York City and to bankers interested in them.
Other articles of interest in the same issue tell of the investments of the Carnegie and Rockefeller Educational Funds; the current demand for gold by England; the first crop report of the year; the bulge in the rubber industry; the railroads' need of terminals. Henry Fink, our foremost expert on railroad rates, tells why the railroads must now advance them. Also the week's news of stock and commodity markets and of incorporated industries.

HOUSEHOLDER CLUBS BURGLAR TO DEATH

"Reddy" Gallagher, Well-Known Crook, Attacked by Philadelphian Whose Home He Tries to Enter.

FIGHT FOR HEAVY LEVER

The Crook Loses and Is Struck Down in the Street as He Runs—His Skull Is Fractured.

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—James, alias "Reddy" Gallagher, a notorious burglar with a long prison record, was killed with a club this morning, after a desperate struggle, by a householder whose home he had attempted to enter.

Samuel Zeanquenian of 2481 North Twenty-third Street was awakened shortly after midnight by his wife, who said a man was trying to get into a neighboring house. Looking out Zeanquenian saw the man in a yard several doors away. Hastily dressing himself he went to his cellar and picked up a long heavy club, used as a lever in a wine press.

By this time the intruder, failing to effect an entrance in the other house, had appeared at Zeanquenian's cellar window. Running into his back yard Zeanquenian sprang at the stranger and a fierce fight ensued.

The burglar managed to get possession of the club, but before he could use it Zeanquenian closed in on him and recovered the weapon. The burglar then ran to the street, followed by Zanquenian, who swung the club and struck the intruder with such force that he was thrown against a lamp post and smashed the lamp.

Uttering a moan of pain, the burglar managed to crawl on his hands and knees about a block from the scene of the encounter. There he was found lying unconscious with a fractured skull and removed to a hospital by the police. He died shortly after being admitted to the institution.

Central Office detectives identified the body at the Morgue as that of James Gallagher, alias Henry Walter, alias William Walter, alias John Hannigan, a notorious burglar, who since his first conviction in 1887 had served four terms for burglary. He was released early this year after serving two years in the Eastern Penitentiary for a bold daylight jewelry robbery. Zeanquenian was held to await the action of the Coroner.

NEW TEST OF DRUNKENNESS.

Los Angeles Police Adopt a Medical Examination from Paris.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 10.—This city to-day officially adopted a new Parisian test to determine absolutely whether prisoners are intoxicated. Men arrested were subjected to the test by the police surgeon or his assistants. The color of the eyes, dilation of pupils, appearance of the skin, odor of the breath, pulse, temperature, tremor of the fingers when extended, arousability, ability to stand or walk without veering or sagging, were closely observed.

There have been many damage suits and cries of police persecution from mista

STACK WINS RECORD CROSS-COUNTRY RUN

Pastime Athlete Leads Nearly 300 Contestants in Glencoe A. C. Handicap Race.

The largest field of long-distance athletes, numbering 293, ever brought together in a handicap cross-country run started yesterday in the second annual road race of the Glencoe Athletic Club, 127th Street and Third Avenue. The event was won by J. J. Stack of the Pastime Athletic Club, with a handicap of 2 minutes and 45 seconds, his time being 19:41.

The course was three and three-quarter miles, starting at the clubhouse, to 126th Street, to Willis Avenue Bridge, across the bridge to 132d Street, to the Sound, then up Walnut Avenue to 142d Street into Robbins Avenue, thence to the boulevard, and finally, crossing over to Third Avenue, finishing at the clubhouse.

The numerous prizes offered by the club were lagely responsible for the big entry list. Prizes were awarded to the first five individuals to finish, three prizes went to the three novices making the best time, two team trophies to the first teams of five men finishing the course, and two medals to the two men making the fastest time over the course.

The Pastime Athletic Club and the Mohawk Athletic Club were first and second, respectively, in the team competition. The novice prizes went to P. Coulter, Mohegan A. C.; J. Edgerton, United A. A., and P. Laroque, Mott Haven A. C. W. J. Kramer of the Acorn A. C. captured the first fast time medal, and Joe Malone of the Mohawk A. C. the second.

The course was thronged for blocks near the finish line, and fully 5,000 persons witnessed the end. When the first man, J. J. Stack, showed himself near the clubhouse the crowd cheered loudly. Stack led his nearest competitor to the tape by fully 100 yards. The order of finish:

CRITICISE GOLF SYSTEM.

Present Method of Championship Play Finds Opposition.

Although the amateur championship tournament of the United States Golf Association, to be held this year over the links of the Country Club of Brookline, will, so far as conditions go, in no way vary from last season, there are those who insist that the system is still open to criticism. The present method was first put into effect last year. It was the result of much thought on the part of students of golf, both East and West, and consisted of an eighteen-hole testing round on the first day, sixty-four to qualify, followed by eighteen more holes of medal play on the morning of the second day, with the best thirty-two scores for the two days to be drawn for match play, all of the match-play rounds to consist of thirty-six holes save the first on the afternoon of the second day, which consisted of a single round.

A majority agree that all match-play rounds should be thirty-six holes, and for that reason they point to the present plan as defective. It has been asserted that the method that would suit the golfers best would be a return to the one of 1898 to 1901, with a thirty-six-hole qualifying round on the first day and thirty-six-hole matches thereafter.

WESTWARD TRIES SAILS.

A. S. Cochrane's New Yacht Shows Splendid Sailing Qualities.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 10.—In a spanking breeze, blowing from fourteen to twenty knots an hour, with squalls, the new schooner yacht Westward, built at the Herreshoffs' works in Bristol for Alexander S. Cochrane of the New York Yacht Club, and which is soon to start for Europe, to race there all Summer, was sent over the thirty-mile course in Narragansett Bay this morning to try out her new sails.

The run was made in less than two hours. The new yacht seemed like a filer to those on the bay who were watching the craft skim over the rough seas, in which she showed her steady qualities as well as her speed.

Capt. Charles Barr was at the wheel, with Capt. Nat Herreshoff, Mr. Cochrane, the owner, and Maitland Briggs of New York close at hand. The Westward slipped her moorings in Bristol Harbor exactly at 10:10, and was back and moored again at 11:50. From a distance the Westward seemed to be handled splendidly by Capt. Barr and his picked crew of thirty men. Additional trials will be held daily along Narragansett Bay until the Westward, with her owner on board, sails for Europe shortly.

Aloha II. Ready for Trial Trip.

Aloha II., the new flagship of Commodore Arthur Curtiss James of the New York Yacht Club, will have its intial trial trip to-day, and before very long, probably within the next fortnight, she will leave for this city. Aloha II. is at present at the yard of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at Quincy, Mass., per constructors. When she starts out for her trial trip to-day her owner will be aboard, together with a large number of specially invited guests. It is planned to make an exhaustive test of both her sail and power plants. When she returns to Quincy it will be for such few adjustments as the trial indicates are necessary, and, then, after a thorough overhauling, she will set sail for New York.

It is not likely that Aloha II. will go abroad this Summer. Commodore James has said that he preferred to cruise this year along the Atlantic Coast rather than to visit the Mediterranean, as it was once his intention to do.

Will Retain American Style Football.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 10.—By a vote of 123 to 1 the Kansas City Alumni Association of the University of Kansas voted to-day in favor of the retention of the American style of football at the school.

BUCKMASTER BADLY HURT.

English Polo Player Breaks Collarbone in Practice at Lakewood.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 10.—The first unfortunate accident of the present polo carnival occurred this afternoon, when W. S. Buckmaster of the Hurlingham team was thrown underneath his pony near the north goal, the animal falling on the Britisher. Buckmaster was carried off the field unconscious, and a physician summoned. For a time it was thought he had sustained internal injuries. He was later carried to the Laurel-in-the-Pines Hotel. Buckmaster's collarbone was shattered. He was resting comfortably to-night.

Jay Gould, fresh from his court tennis triumph, appeared in practice to-day for the first time in seven years, and received a hearty reception. After the stern battle of Saturday no regular game was played to-day or score kept. A large crowd of resort visitors was on the grounds during the practice.

KRAMER'S SPRINT WINS.

Champion Defeats Hehir on the Newark Velodrome Track.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., April 10.—In a sensational sprint here to-day at the Velodrome track, Frank L. Kramer, the cycle champion, beat Paddy Hehir, the Australian cyclist, in the one-mile open professional event. Hehir was bunched with him, West, and Bedell, a few yards from the tape. Hehir shot from the bunch after Kramer, but the champion crossed the tape by a little over a wheel's length. Hehir took Kramer's measure in the half-mile professional handicap.

Kramer was the scratch man, and Hehir had a handicap of twenty yards. The Australian, in an exciting finish, crossed the tape ahead of Kramer by about twelve inches. Fred Hill, who had a handicap of forty yards, was a good third. The two-mile open amateur race proved interesting for the fans. There were fifteen riders entered, and Fred McCarthy outclassed all his competitors. The summary:

One-Mile Novice.—Won by Martin Ryan, Newark; H. Kempfel, Newark, second. Time—2:53 2-5.

THIS WEEK'S BOXING BOUTS.

With a new club in the field the followers of boxing will be well supplied with fistic entertainment this week. The new club is to be known as the Madison A. C. and will stage an all-star show on Saturday night at Sulzer's Harlem River Casino.

One of the best bouts of the week will be between Johnny Coulon, who claims the bantam title, and Young O'Leary, the promising bantam of the east side. Coulon arrived in town Saturday night and is said to be in fine shape for this battle. The pair will clash in the star bout to-night at the Marathon A. C. of Brooklyn for ten rounds.

Young Otto, who is now under the management of Jimmie De Forrest, is scheduled to meet Paddy Sullivan at the weekly stag of the Sharkey A. C. for ten rounds Wednesday night.

The weekly stag of the Empire A. C. will be held at 135th Street and Eighth Avenue. In Manhattan Casino, on Thursday evening. The officials of the club have several excellent boxing bouts in view for the occasion, and Pal Moore, the clever little Philadelphian, will appear in the star bout of ten rounds.

Willie Beecher, the new "Ghetto Champion," will take a jump into another class Thursday evening, when he meets Maxey Baker, the Boston lightweight, in the star bout of ten rounds at the Long Acre A. A. in West Twenty-ninth Street. Besides this bout Manager Newman has arranged several excellent preliminaries.

A. A. U. Boxing Championships.

The boxing championships of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held to-night and to-morrow evening at the Mechanics' Building, Boston. Almost all the entrants are from the large cities near Boston, the majority being named from that city and New York. Very heavy demands have been made upon the management for seats, and the belief is now being freely expressed that the Amateur Athletic Union will have a small surplus to show this year as against the deficits of preceding competitions. The local entrants are:

105-Pound Class—John O'Leary, New West Side A. C., and W. Riley.

115-Pound Class—H. Y. Barrows, Brown's Gymnasium; James Carroll, New West Side A. C.; M. J. Carroll, Glencoe A. C., and F. Christie.

125-Pound Class—Andrew Cortes; Frank Smith, New West Side A. C., and M. Murphy.

135-Pound Class—Benjamin Sackheim; Michael Maguire; John Collins, New West Side A. C.; George Smithlin, Glencoe A. C., and W. Hopkins.

Finlanders Win Relay Marathon.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 10.—Carl Nismirin and William Kolehaiminen of Finland, world's champion marathon relay team, beat Ferrucion Panzeri and William Meyers, the German-Italian pair, in a relay marathon at the Clifton Stadium this afternoon by over a mile in 2:13:32. This is four minutes slower than the Finlanders' record, but good time, considering a thirty-mile-an-hour wind blowing on the stretches. Harry Mask of Brooklyn beat [illegible] in a 220-yard dash, [illegible] ogran J. Schell [illegible] of Newark in a

COLLEGES RE-FORM BASKET BALL LEAGUE

New Organization Will Embrace Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Princeton.

The Intercollegiate Basket Ball Association, which went out of existence two years ago owing to faculty objections at two of the colleges then competing in the annual championship, was reorganized yesterday at a meeting at the Cornell Club. The rejuvenated league will embrace the same colleges as formerly, Cornell, Columbia, Princeton, Pennsylvania, and Yale making the full total. An effort will be made to secure the membership of Harvard, and thus bring the organization to the full total of colleges as formerly played in the Intercollegiate Association of about five years ago.

The preliminary step in the organization of the league was taken some time ago, and the delegates then, while favorably disposed to the project, had to receive the sanction of the faculties of their respective colleges before announcing a definite decision as to whether the colleges would participate in the reorganization plan. Yesterday there were two representatives from each of the five colleges which now compose the league.

The question of schedule was not entered into to any great extent, but it will embrace the same ideas as formerly. Each college will play two games with all the others, one out of town and the other at home.

Two officers of the new basket ball league were elected at the meeting. The President is R. B. Hyatt of Yale and the Secretary and Treasurer is Ralph Morgan of Pennsylvania. The Executive Committee is composed of R. B. Hyatt of Yale, Ralph Morgan of Pennsylvania, W. W. Roper of Princeton, C. V. P. Young of Cornell, and C. W. Cuthell of Columbia.

The delegates who organized the new league were: Yale, James E. Finneffy and J. E. Rowland; Princeton, B. Hughes and F. R. Craven; Pennsylvania, Ralph Morgan and P. P. Browning; Columbia, C. W. Cuthell and William MacRossie, and Cornell, J. H. Scott and C. H. Cull.

COLLEGES ENTER CREWS.

Yale, Columbia, Harvard, Penn., and Georgetown in A. R. A. Regatta.

Present indications point to one of the most successful regattas in the history of the American Rowing Association when that organization opens the intercollegiate and interclub rowing season with its eighth annual regatta on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, May 21. Secretary Clement B. Wood has announced a change in the programme by which the octuple sculls race has been dropped and a special event for second club eights has been substituted. The programme will consist of twelve events as follows:

First single sculls for Farragut Cup, second single sculls, first double sculls for Schuylkill Challenge Cup, first four sculls, (centipedes,) first pair-oared shells, first four-oared shells for Puritan Challenge Cup, second four-oared shells, first eight-oared shells for Stewards' Challenge Cup, special interclub eight-oared shells for second crews, junior collegiate eight-oared shells for New England Cup, interscholastic eight-oared shells for Franklin Cup, and freshman eight-oared shells.

According to the latest advices there will be at least one newcomer among the college crews in the junior collegiate event. This is Columbia, none of whose crews has ever rowed in this regatta. Definite assurances have also been received that Yale, Harvard, and Pennsylvania will be on hand as usual. It is also understood that Georgetown will send up a crew. Although Cornell has a junior race with Pennsylvania at Ithaca the week following, efforts are being made to have the Ithacans send their crew to the Schuylkill. Cornell's final action is yet to be determined.

It is not known what Princeton will decide to do. Mr. Roper, the new Princeton Athletic Director, has already been named as one of the Stewards, succeeding the late C. C. Cuyler for Princeton, and if the Tigers take part in any outside regattas this year it is likely that they will be seen here.

The octuple sculls race was dropped because of the lack of interest shown in this event. The race for second club eights was put on for the benefit of the clubmen who are not able to begin training as early as the colleges. The collegians are not eligible for this event.

The Stewards are making every effort to secure a good representation for the school event, because they want this race to continue to decide the interscholastic championship of the country, as it has usually done in the past.

WANT FOREIGN CREWS.

European Nations Invited to Compete in National Regatta.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—With the best crews on both sides of the Atlantic competing on the Potomac, the National regatta of 1910, to be held here in August, promises to be an event of international interest. Through the State Department the co-operation of foreign Governments will be sought. The diplomatic representatives in Washington will be asked to urge their home Governments to arrange for entries for their countrymen.

The Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen has been trying to have the contest made official, and the letters bearing the official seal of the State Department, with Secretary Knox's signature, to be sent to the legations, have made the regatta officials hopeful that England, France, Germany, Italy, and Belgium will compete with the American entries.

President Taft helped make last year's regatta on the Potomac a success. He is an enthusiast on rowing, and made a reputation as an oarsman while a student at Yale.

Harvard Wants New Rowing Date.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 10.—The Harvard rowing management has written to the Naval Academy that it will bring its crew here on Thursday of the coming week, but that it would prefer to row the race against the Naval Academy crew April 21 instead of April 23. The permission to row on the new date can probably be obtained, but it will be with much difficulty. Much interest is being taken in the visit of the Harvard oarsmen, which will cover the week from April 14 to April 21. If Harvard's suggestion as to the date of the race is accepted.

Sunday Soccer Football.

Playing against the eleven of the Wilberforce Football Club of Paterson at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, the Brooklyns placed another victory in the National League series by the score of 6 goals to 0 to their credit. With the wind against them the victors scored well, taking 3 goals in the first half and as many in the second.

The Brooklyns placed another team in the field for the Amateur League fixture with the Arcadia Thistles yesterday, and this was played off before the National League match at Marquette Oval. The Arcadia Thistles proved to be the victors by the score of 3 goals to 1.

The Clan MacDonalds of Brooklyn improved their standing at the head of the teams in the championship competition of the New York Amateur Association Football League by defeating the Astoria Independents by the score of 4 goals to 0 at MacDonald Field in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon.

An assault upon Referee H. Agar, also Secretary of the New York Amateur Association Football League, in the game between the Camerons and Highbridge at Van Cortlandt Park, yesterday resulted in his ordering off the field Booth and Glass, two of the Highbridge players, shortly after the restart. About the same time L. Bayley, outside right for the Camerons, had an arm put out in a mix-up, and he, too, retired from the game. The Camerons, with the wind against them in the first half, led by 1 goal to 0, and finally scored a decisive victory, 4 to 1.

At Yonkers the Hollywood Inn won the Amateur League game from the Critchleys by a score of 3 to 0. Salmon scored twice and Porter once for the home team. J. Tait of the Critchleys retired hurt shortly after the restart.

The steamship Mauretania eleven, which defeated the Brooklyns by 1 to 0 on Saturday, won from the Cameron Reserves by 5 to 0 at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday.

Sheppard to Leave National Guard.

Melvin W. Sheppard as a result of the charge that he tried to use spiked shoes in the Military Athletic League championships and his disqualification by the referee, Lieut. Col. Wingate, announced yesterday that he would withdraw from the Twenty-second Regiment and leave the National Guard for all time. He claims that the whole matter was an injustice, and that he did not wear spikes.

MARAUDING WEASEL MEETS DEATH IN ZOO

Central Park Pelicans Go to the Aid of Pigeons the Little Animal Attacked.

HIDALGO PETE A MARTYR

Breaks a Wing in Fall from the Pigeon Cote and Goes to the Hospital —He Will Recover.

The usual calm of Pelican Bay, as the little pond in the pelican house at the Central Park Zoo is called by the keepers, was broken early yesterday morning by an occurrence which for a while drove the inmates to the borderland of panic and resulted in serious injury to Hidalgo Pete, one of the three funny looking pelicans which live there the year 'round.

Hidalgo Pete, with his friends Signor Gomez and Sanchez Hoolihoo, both of whom came from the Spanish Main, but who have been residing in Central Park as long as the 12-year-old visitors can remember, were standing idly along the brink of Pelican Bay shortly after sunrise waiting to see if the lone goldfish, which Head Keeper Snyder had launched into the pond a few days ago, would venture near enough to afford one of the three a breakfast. Uncle Dick, the sandhill crane, whose solemn mein has caused many a laugh to the Zoo visitors, and who is the recognized dean of the pelican house, was standing on one leg in his customary attitude, dozing with one eye half open, so as not to miss anything which might happen.

Over in the lion house a few yards away the jungle animals were beginning to growl uneasily for their breakfasts, but outside of those noises and the chirping of the sparrows and the cooing of the pigeons which live up near the roof of the pelican house the Zoo was about as quiet as it ever becomes. The pigeons which have their cotes in the pelican house are the special pets of Keeper Snyder and his assistant, Bob Hurtin.

But when Keeper Snyder entered the Park and started toward his office, in the rear of the elephant house, he heard a sudden commotion in the pigeon cote. One of the nesting pigeons was fluttering frantically inside, beating its wings against the walls and evidently fighting with something. An instant later the entire flock of pigeons was in a state of intense excitement. From inside the cote came sounds of a struggle. The sharp cries of some sort of small animal were mingled with the fluttering of wings and the excited coolings of the pigeons.

Nor was the excitement confined to the pigeon cote. At the first sounds of trouble Hidalgo Pete and his two friends shook off their drowsiness and began to lop clumsily about the floor of the pelican house. Uncle Dick so forgot himself as to plant both feet firmly on the ground and crane his neck to see what the trouble was all about.

Snyder hurried to the spot, and reached the inclosure in time to see a weasel dart from the pigeon cote out upon the narrow platform outside and glance down, as though about to spring. It was followed by a dozen or so pigeons, all pecking savagely and beating the animal with their wings. Sanchez Hoolihoo and the other pelicans saw the head of the weasel at the same moment and apparently divined the cause of the commotion. Now, the weasel is one of the most-dreaded enemies of all wild fowl, not excepting even the hawk, for the slender little animal has the disagreeable habit not only of sucking any eggs it happens to come across but of attacking the wild fowl themselves in its effort to get food.

Perhaps the pelicans had had experiences with weasels before, or maybe they mistook the weasel for an uncommonly large rat, and rats are not at all in good favor with Hidalgo Pete and his pals.

At any rate Hidalgo Pete and the other pelicans showed an immediate desire to aid their friends, the pigeons. Sanchez Hoolihoo, who is somewhat quicker than the others, owing to his youth, opened wide his long beak and uttered a squawk which awoke the echoes of the Zoo. And then he tried to spring into the air and reach the platform of the pigeon cote. But the wings of Sanchez Hoolihoo proved inadequate to the trip. He fell with a mighty splash into Pelican Bay. Signor Gomez also attempted the short flight, but one of his wings was clipped only the other day, and he too plunged backward into the pond and came up with his baggy pouch full of water.

Now the wings of Hidalgo Pete had grown rapidly in the Winter months, and, moreover, the keepers had not clipped the feathers from his right wing for nearly two years. Hidalgo Pete seemed to pay no heed to the mishap of his pals. Just as Signor Gomez struck the water Hidalgo Pete leaped and his wings began to beat the air. The tip of one struck Uncle Dick in the eye, and he began to perform contortions with his four or five feet of snakelike neck.

But this did not interrupt the flight of Hidalgo Pete. He reached the platform of the pigeon cote. The weasel had retreated back into the cote and the fighting was going on fiercely inside. Hidalgo Pete stuck his two-foot-long bill inside. Whether the weasel grabbed Hidalgo by the fleshy pouch or whether one of the excited pigeons landed a heavy wing stroke across the pelican's tender nose is not known, but at any rate there was a muffled squawk, and Hidalgo Pete jerked back his bill with such force that he lost his balance and tumbled. It was an eight-foot drop to the bottom of the pelican house, and when Hidalgo Pete landed on the gravel at the edge of the pool he fell all in a heap, with one wing doubled under him. And there he lay.

Just then the weasel again appeared on the platform, pursued by the pigeons. And this time it leaped. The animal cleared the whole length of Pelican Bay and crashed up against the wire mesh of the opposite wall. The shock stunned the weasel, apparently, for its paused there. Had not Uncle Dick been very busy just then with his injured eye it is likely he would have become a hero.

Sanchez Hoolihoo and Signor Gomez, who by this time had shaken the water from their plumage, sprang toward the weasel, and as they reached it and began to peck frantically at the little animal the excited pigeons swarmed about them. Just who put the finishing touches to the weasel is not known, for the wild fowl shut out the view from Keeper Snyder. But even after the animal was dead the two pelicans and the pigeons kept jabbing their bills at it.

By this time Snyder had got the pelican house door open and was inside. Hidalgo Pete was lying still where he had fallen. He tried to get up as Snyder approached, but was able only to beat one wing on the floor and squawk. Snyder picked him up and felt around for broken bones. One of Hidalgo Pete's wings was broken and one of his legs seemed to be out of joint. After the keeper had picked up the dead weasel he took Hidalgo Pete off to the Zoo hospital, and later in the day he said he thought he could pull the pelican through.

The Zoo keepers think the weasel was a mate of one which was killed in the park more than a year ago, when it was trying to reach the nest of one of the whistling swans on Swan Island.

Engine Hits a Man Who Runs Across Tracks at New London.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 10.—While Frederick Sullivan, a hack driver, was standing on the platform south of Union Station about 9 o'clock this morning a gust of wind blew his hat off.

Sullivan chased the hat, which was making a beeline across the tracks toward the Thames River. He did not notice a swiftly approaching switching engine and it hit him, fracturing his skull and cutting off one leg. He died in a few moments. He was 24 years old and single.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—With the exception of local rains and snows Saturday night in Northern New England the weather has been fair east of the Mississippi River. To the westward, however, the weather has been unsettled, with low pressure and some showers. High temperatures continue except in New England, the lake region, and the Pacific States, and they are especially high for the season in the Missouri and Upper Mississippi Valleys and the Northwest. Unsettled weather, with showers, will continue Monday over the greater portion of the West, and the eastward drift of the low pressure will result in the extension of the unsettled weather conditions over the Mississippi Valley and western upper lake region during Monday or Monday night, reaching the Atlantic Coast by Tuesday or Tuesday night. The winds along the New England Coast will be light to moderate northwest to north; Middle Atlantic Coast, light north to northeast; South Atlantic Coast, light and variable.

Steamers departing Monday for European ports will have light to moderate northwest to north winds with fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Monday. Tuesday increasing cloudiness; warmer in the interior, light to moderate north to northeast winds.

New Jersey—Fair Monday. Tuesday increasing cloudiness; light north to northeast winds.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Monday. Tuesday increasing cloudiness; warmer in north portion, light north to northeast winds.

New England—Fair Monday. Tuesday partly cloudy; warmer in west portion, light to moderate northwest to north winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

MANHATTAN—FOR SALE.

A LARGE buyer of guaranteed mortgages recently said: "I prefer to deal with the New York Mortgage and Security Company because the quality of their mortgages is so uniformly good."

That struck the keynote of our business policy—quality, not quantity.

We might easily double or triple our annual sales, if we chose to lower our loaning standard. But that would mean increasing the risk, and we prefer to preserve our unique distinction among the large mortgage guaranty companies of being the only one which has never made a loss. That is a record worth preserving, and the shrewdest investors appreciate it.

FLAMES SWEEP OLD MORRIS PARK TRACK

Westchester Village Endangered by Fire Which Destroys Famous Stables.

THREE ALARMS SENT IN

Fire Engine Burned Before Chief Croker Arrives — Trains Delayed — Thousands Watch Prairie Fire.

Out to the north of the old Morris Park race track, which is to be cut up into building lots, they are already grading other lots.

One of the machines they use is a big steam roller, which was at work yesterday. Perhaps a spark from its smokestack was carried by the high wind over the wire fence into last year's dead grass that lay thick on the two square miles of the old race track. Maybe some one set fire to the grass in the northern end of the field; perhaps it was a spark from an engine on the Harlem River Division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

The firemen are not certain about the origin, but at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the grass at the north end of the field was all ablaze, and the hard-blowing wind was sweeping waves of flame across the field toward the village of Westchester.

Around the outer edges of the field stood the dozen or more stables, once used to house the racers. These are frame barns 40 by 30 feet, one and a half stories high, occupied by a few negroes, who have never deserted the track. There was also a good deal of lumber stored near them by the Fidelity Realty Company, which is to cut up the track into building lots. These stable numbers are familiar to old-time racing men.

The first to take fire was No. 16, and then No. 49 was caught by the flames, followed successively by Nos. 50, 18, and 15, which once was Pittsburg Phil.'s No. 14, which was Wollcott & Campbell's, and Nos. 13 and 12. The fire went roaring down along the western fence. Six old stables along the eastern fence were the only ones not touched.

Westchester Village in Peril.

Fed by the dead grass, mounting higher and higher as it went, the fire swept on toward Weschester Village. At the old clubhouse, which stands upon a hill, it divided, and the house escaped, but a water tower was destroyed.

In the centre of the field George Thompson, once a Vanderbilt jockey, aided by Edmund Blanc, was building a forty-foot seagoing vessel, which is nearly complete and which he has already named the Muriel. The old jockey said that he had started work on the Muriel with the intention of rolling her to the Harlem River, which is some two miles away, and then sailing for Florida.

When he saw the fire coming across the field yesterday Thompson and Blanc, aided by friends, got enough water and mud to so thoroughly wet down the Muriel that she weathered the sea of flame. Thompson says she ought to go through anything now.

In the meantime fire alarms had been sent in. The first company to reach the scene was the Van Ness Hose Company, the only volunteer company left in the city. Lieut. George Kingsley, with his fifty men, went to the southeast corner of the field, where they were most needed.

There John Moriati, the race track caretaker, lived in a two-story frame house. Somewhat to the north of his house two barns were burning, and it seemed that his house would catch fire any minute. The volunteer firemen tried the plugs inside the race track, but time had long since clogged them, and they yielded no water. The firemen went outside the field, but they had no engine and the pressure was very weak.

Moriati's house was soon in flames from the rain of red sparks that fell on the roof. He jumped from a second-story window, but was not hurt. His two horses, his cow, and his chickens, which were in a small barn, were burned up.

Fire Engine Destroyed by Fire.

When Engine Company 62 arrived from Westchester, Capt. Smith ordered away the volunteers and stationed the engine between the two burning barns, but the heat was so intense it set the woodwork of the engine on fire. The firemen had all they could do to save the horses from burning to death. The engine was deserted and all its woodwork was destroyed.

Three alarms were rung in, which brought out ten engines and Chief Croker. He said that Moriati's house could have been saved if the firemen had begun fighting intelligently.

Chief Croker stretched hose lines across the railway tracks to get at plugs that would yield some water, but even then he did not get a strong pressure. It sometime required tow engines to pull enough water for one line of hose. Traffic on the railway was held up for two hours, and trains were banked up on both sides of the lines for half a mile.

The wind lifted a cloud of sparks over the southern fence, raining them down on the roofs of the nearby houses. One of the first to catch was the Westchester M. E. Church, which is a hundred years old.

The Rev. F. C. Faust, a young preacher who had come to put in his first Sunday there, superintended its defense. Several holes were burned in the roof and the building was wet within and without, but the pastor said he would have services last night, and he did.

Great Crowd Watches Flames.

Several stables along Westchester Avenue, near the church, were set on fire, but none was destroyed. The whole village was threatened for a time by the rain of red sparks on the dry-shingled roofs of the houses. Many trees near the race track grounds were killed by the heat.

The fire burned all afternoon, and it attracted an army of people, who saw a pretty good representation of a raging prairie fire, with some trimmings that never attend such. The police reserves of the Westchester, Tremont, Bronx Park, and Wakefield Stations were sent to the scene.

As the fire swept across the race track field destroying the old stables many families of squirrels that had made their homes in the old buildings, ran out ahead of the flames. They were met by boys and dogs, who so harried them back and forth that they often ran back into the fire and were roasted.

As the sun went down hundreds of crows that had roosted in the old barns came flying across the field. Not seeing their homes they circled about the field, their numbers added to every minute. At dark a vast flock was still flying around the burned field.

FIRE ROUTS HOME INMATES.

Aged Men and Women Carried Down Ladders—Smoke Overcomes Three.

Fire drove out the sixty inmates of the Fritz Reuter Home for Aged Persons, at the Schuetzen Park in North Bergen, yesterday afternoon. Three of the aged inmates had to be taken to the North Hudson Hospital owing to their having inhaled smoke while they were being carried out. They are not in danger.

The volunteer firemen of the neighborhood saved the building, but until some repairs are made a score or so of the inmates will be cared for in a roadhouse close to the home.

The fire started about 2 o'clock in the office of Supt. Charles Liirssen, on the ground floor to the right of the main entrance.

The location of the fire caused the main hall and those above it almost instantly to fill with dense smoke, and the work of rescue was attended with great difficulty.

Firemen of North Bergen, Union Hill, and West Hoboken took out twenty-three of the inmates who had not succeeded in getting out. Owing to their age most of these had to be carried out and down ladders.

The fire swept up the front centre of the building and did some $12,000 to $15,000 damage.

M. O. ROBERTS'S WIDOW WINS.

Suit Over Income from $4,000,000 Estate Settled After Five Years.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided the long-standing dispute between the executors of the estate of Marshall O. Roberts, who died in 1889 leaving property now worth nearly $4,000,000. The decision reverses the lower courts, through which the suit has dragged for five years, in favor of Mr. Roberts's widow, who now is the wife of Col. Ralph Vivian and who lives in England. Mrs. Vivian's co-executor is John F. Patterson, and it was he who started the litigation which has just been settled.

Mrs. Vivian, whose maiden name was Susan Endicott, is a descendant of the Mayflower Endicotts and lived in Salem, Mass. She met Mr. Roberts in 1874, and became his third wife when he was 75 years old. At that time Mr. Roberts had one son, Isaac E. Roberts, and two daughters, Mary M. Roberts and Mrs. Caroline Van Wart. Another son, Marshall O. Roberts, was born of the third marriage. This son has been living in England with his mother since her marriage to Col. Vivian in 1892.

Some years before his death Mr. Roberts bought the house adjoining his own at 105 Fifth Avenue. Both places contained many paintings, valued at $800,000. There was much gold and silver plate, bronzes, antique furniture, and other works of art. In his will Mr. Roberts left these two houses and all their contents for the use of his wife for life, and further stipulated that all expenses in taking care of the property should be paid out of the general estate. He also directed that she should have $40,000 a year, and he divided the income of his residuary estate among his children in equal shares.

In 1897 Mrs. Vivian decided to live in England, and the contents of the houses, exclusive of most of the paintings, which she took with her, were sold, bringing $57,704. Of this amount Mr. Patterson invested $55,000 in mortgages on the houses at 381 and 383 West End Avenue. Mrs. Vivian declared that she didn't authorize the investment and wasn't consulted about it. The owners of the property defaulted on the mortgage, and in 1900 it was foreclosed. The property was bid in by the executors at $50,000, leaving a deficiency judgment of $11,299. One of the houses remained vacant for six years, and up to the commencement of the action just settled, in 1906, Mrs. Vivian received no income whatever from the amount realized from the sale of the Fifth Avenue household articles.

There also was another dispute between Mrs. Vivian and Mr. Patterson and the two heirs over the sale of the two Fifth Avenue houses in 1899. Mrs. Vivian decided to accept $500,000 for the property, and the courts gave permission for the sale. Since that time $13,101 has been paid out of the general estate for taxes and other expenses which Mrs. Vivian refused to bear.

John H. Judge, as referee, sustained the contention of Mr. Patterson and directed that no more income be paid to Mrs. Vivian until she returned to the estate the $13,101 advance out of the general fund, and the lower court confirmed it.

When the present suit ends the residuary legatees will be entitled to more than $60,000 each out of the nearly $200,000 income of the residuary estate that had accumulated up to the commencement of the action.

Marshall O. Roberts is now a Lieutenant in the Scots Guards. In 1903 he married Irene Helen Murray, daughter of Sir George Murray, former private secretary to Gladstone.

UPSET IN LITTLE HELL GATE.

Eight Boys Were Going Fishing in a Launch—All Saved.

Eight boys from 18 to 20 years old had to swim for their lives yesterday morning when the sixteen-foot gasoline launch Alick of the Morrisania Yacht Club was upset in Little Hell Gate. Seven, though handicapped by having on all their clothes and shoes, negotiated the distance to safety, but the eighth, James J. Gillon of 987 Second Avenue, was thrown under the boat and injured. Henry Struttmatter of 1,000 Avenue A, who was in charge of the launch, grabbed him by the collar and swam with him to a dredge 100 feet away, to which also swam the other seven boys.

A police patrol boat, arriving on the scene too late to make any rescues, towed the launch back to the Dewey Boat Club at the foot of East Fifty-fifth Street, from which the start had been made early in the morning. There the boys had their clothes dried.

The launch was on the way to City Island, and had entered Little Hell Gate, to stop over at South Brother Island. Just off Buzzan Rocks the launch punched into a rope tieing a dredge to the rocks, and was upset.

The seven boys who saved themselves were John Seeger, 1,026 Avenue A; Frank Knoch, 421 East Seventy-eighth Street; Frank Newberger, 319 East Ninety-second Street; William Youngert, 506 East Fifty-fifth Street; John Youngert, 1,056 First Avenue; Anton Gresshauber, 1,006 Avenue A, and Struttmatter.

BOILER EXPLODES; FOUR HURT

Accident in B. R. T. Power House in Williamsburg—Traffic Uninterrupted.

One of the tubes of a boiler in the cellar of the power house of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, in Kent Avenue and Division Street, Williamsburg, exploded at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, seriously injuring four men, two of whom may die. The injured are:

VERGEER, PETER, engineer, 602 Court Street, South Brooklyn, scalded about the face, arms, and legs; will recover.

HALL, TONEY, fireman, 268 Navy Street, Brooklyn, scalded about the head, arms, and chest; will probably die.

TERONI, SALVATORE, fireman, 1,014 Fifty-ninth Street, scalded about head, arms, and chest; will probably die.

DEVASIO, JOSEPH, fireman, 55 South Second Street, scalded about arms and legs.

The explosion occurred when the traffic on the lines of the B. R. T. was at its height, but the power was uninterrupted. Only one boiler in the cellar was affected by the explosion, and the dynamos on the floor above were kept running with the exception of a small one dependent entirely upon the steam of the boiler which exploded. The building was not damaged.

The four injured men were attended by Dr. Cohen of the Eastern District Hospital. Vergeer and Devasio were allowed to go home, but Hall and Teroni were rushed to the hospital, where it was said that they had little chance of recovery.

THREATENED, KILL TWO.

Pennsylvanians Went to Woods to Talk Over Black Hand Letters.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 10.—Marcon Gabriel was shot to death today and his brother, Giusippi Gabriel, was perhaps mortally wounded. Samuel and James Kuchin, brothers, are under arrest charged with doing the shooting. The affair occurred at Brodericks, a small hamlet on the west side of the Susquehanna River, about three miles from this city.

The shooting is supposed to have been the outcome of Black Hand letters received by the Kuchin brothers, demanding $500 on threats of murder. The defendants declare that the four went into the woods to discuss the terms set forth in the letters. The Kuchins made known some time ago to the county authorities the demand that had been made upon them, and County Detective Power gave them $30 in marked bills. Instead of complying with the demands the Kuchins are said to have fired four shots, and then run away. They were later arrested by County Detective Power and members of the State police.

Young Subway Rowdies Dealt With.

Four boys who had been playing baseball in Van Cortlandt Park started home on a Subway train last evening with the determination of making sport of the guards and worrying their fellow-passengers. They prevented the closing of the doors, till at Dyckman Street three special officers swooped down on the boys and gathered them in. Martin Mayers, 14 years old, was held for the Children's Court. William Weinberg, 18, and Oscar Wainbach, 16, were fined $10 each, and David Bauch, 17, was sent to the workhouse.

KOSHER BUTCHERS NOW REFUSE TO BUY

Parade to East Side Abattoirs and Announce They Are Losing Money.

PRICES MUST COME DOWN

More Attacks by Women on Such Butchers' Shops as Stay Open—Striking Housewives Open Headquarters.

More than seven hundred members of the Hebrew Retail Kosher Butchers' Protective Association met yesterday at 763 First Avenue and resolved not to buy a pound of meat for twenty-four hours. Another meeting is to be called this morning, when they will decide whether to make the boycott of the slaughter houses permanent until prices are reduced at least to nine cents, as it was four months ago.

Retail kosher butchers in the Bronx also held a meeting yesterday, at which they passed similar resolutions.

Preceding the First Avenue meeting the butchers met at several east side halls, where they were exhorted by their more vehement members to stand together and fight the trust. The butchers then assembled at Houston Street and First Avenue and marched up the avenue to Fortieth Street, visiting the slaughter and packing houses, getting prices, and protesting to the proprietors against the increases.

When the butchers hove in sight there was a hasty barring of doors and windows by the abattoir folk, who feared that the retailers had descended upon them to seek revenge for the scath which the discontented housewives had wrought on their shops. Leaving the rest of the seven hundred retail butchers in the middle of the avenue, President Benjamin Lastfogel of the Hebrew Retail Kosher Butchers' Protective Association, Joseph Weissman, Louis Pevnik, M. Wisinger, Joseph Boyarsky, and other officers of the organization ascended the shipping platforms of the slaughter houses and held a parley with the slaughter house officials through the window gratings.

"We want to know what you are selling chucks for to-day," said President Lastfogel.

"The price is 13 cents, same as last week," was the answer at each slaughter house.

"But we can't buy at that price. We've been losing money for fourteen weeks," cried President Lastfogel, raising his voice angrily, amid the encouraging nods and murmurings of his followers. "Since you've raised the price our women customers won't buy. They're boycotting us. They're breaking our windows. We buy a carcass at 13 cents, but 30 per cent. of it is waste or fat, which our customers expect us to give them free. When we sell a pound of good meat, we have to throw in a piece of fat, for which we have had to pay. For fourteen weeks we have been losing from $5 to $10 a week. What are you going to do about it?"

President Lastfogel's aids-de-camp exploded into a torrent of remonstrance. The 700-strong army of butchers in the street became excited, too, and drew close to the slaughter house platforms. The slaughter house employes hastily shut their windows and stood behind them with clubs, knives, and cleavers to repel besiegers.

"If you want it at 13 cents, take it. If you don't want it, go into some other business," they shouted.

After a conference President Lastfogel led his forces to a small hall on the second floor at 763 First Avenue. His army was so numerous that it overflowed the little meeting room and flowed down the narrow stairs into the street, but they passed the resolution pledging themselves not to buy meat for a day as related.

The Bronx meeting took place at Weiner's Hall, 171st Street and Third Avenue. It reached practically the same conclusion.

The striking housewives, who have been fighting 18-cent kosher meat with boycotts and paving stones, opened a headquarters at 315 Grand Street. The "strike" extended yesterday to Williamsburg, Brownsville, and the Myrtle Avenue section. Meetings protesting at the 18-cent rate also were held at Claremont Casino, in Wendover Avenue, the Bronx at 181 McKibben Street, and 886 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn.

The housewives also continued their window smashing wherever they could find a kosher butcher hardy enough to open his shop. I. Vegdor, whose shop is at 353 Madison Street, was one of these, and his "villainy" was discovered by a little girl, who told her mother. The woman summoned the other striking housewives, who gathered around Vegdor's place. A brick shattered his plate-glass window, and the single policeman on beat, unable to cope with the swarming women, telephoned for the reserves, who dispersed the crowd.

A policeman arrested a Mrs. Cohen and took her over to the Madison Street Station. Mrs. Cohen is herself the wife of a kosher butcher, and another kosher butcher, D. Lazarowitz of 412 Cherry Street, gave bail for her.

In Essex Market Court the charge against her was dismissed.

Windows were also broken in the shops of M. Cohen, 17 Cannon Street, and B. Bayer, 58 Broome Street. But almost all the butchers' shops were closed tightly all day.

At a meeting of 300 Williamsburg retailers at Rubenstein Hall in Morrell Street, Brooklyn, it was decided to assist their customers in boycotting slaughter house proprietors' meat. The retailers decided to keep their shops closed all to-day and to cancel all orders.

Jacob Holtzer was elected President of the Williamsburg retailers' organization.

One hundred Williamsburg housewives held a meeting at 181 McKibben Street and passed a resolution to boycott meat. The women then went from house to house, asking the other housekeepers of the district to join them in the boycott.

APPRAISERS NEED STORES.

Treasury Department Considering the Purchase of West Street Block.

Having outgrown its quarters, the Appraiser's Stores at Morton and Washington Streets are to be abandoned. The Treasury Department has taken the matter under consideration with the view of recommending to Congress the purchase of a square block adjoining the present stores. It is the opinion of former Appraiser Edward S. Fowler, Collector Loeb, and other customs officers that a new building should be located on the water front near West Fortieth Street.

A statement filed with the Collector shows that during the first quarter of 1907 more than 161,000 packages were received at the stores. During the same quarter this year the number had been increased to more than 169,000.

RUSSIAN JEWS IN SAD PLIGHT.

Worse Than Under Plehve, Magnes Says—Fears the News Is Suppressed.

Preaching yesterday in Temple Emanu-El, the Rev. Dr. J. L. Magnes took a pessimistic view of the condition of the Jews in Russia, intimating that the worst about it was not known here.

"The condition of Russia is worse to-day than at any time since the barbarous massacres and pogroms of 1905 and 1906," said Dr. Magnes. "The American public is unaware of this state of affairs, because the chief news agency supplying our press with information is, without much doubt, in the service of the Russian Government. Even though news was supplied the story of Jewish misery in Russia is such an oft repeated tale that hardly any attention is paid to it any more. But the condition of affairs is getting to be so fearful that it becomes necessary to raise our voice in protest and to appeal to the conscience of our fellow-citizens to take cognizance of the systematic, relentless, quiet grinding down of a people of more than 6,000,000 souls."

The preacher then read from a list of Russian Governmental decrees issued since January of this year. He cited the instance in particular of the City of Kieff, whence more than 5,000 Jews, long residents there, are to be expelled this month. The situation, according to the speech of a member of the Duma, is worse, he said, than in the time of Plehve. Among the places whence Jews were being expelled, besides Kieff, were, during January, Tashkend, 300 Bokhara Jews; St. Petersburg, 37 Jews; Toropza, order to expel 36 families rescinded through intervention of local residents, and Demiovaka, 280 families. During Februry: Kazlov, several families; Yalta, order to expel artisans. Furthermore, during February the Emir of Bokhara and the Governor General of Turkestan had endeavored to have an order of the Russian Government to expel 32,000 Jewis of Persian birth rescinded. During March: Riga, 150 families; Zhitomir, priests demanded expulsion of Jews in vicinity; Vologda, permits of residents revised and expulsions followed; Vlotka, 100 Russian artisans and their families expelled; Woronesch, many families threatened with summary expulsion allowed an extension of time only after many petitions and protests. Expulsions from Lozeni, Zukoff, and Potrel; 40 families expelled also in Helsingfors, Finland. In Tifils, Dr. Magnes said, permits have been examined and expulsions are to follow.

"It becomes a duty of American Jews," he said in conclusion, "to appeal to the public opinion of the citizens of this country, and to take whatever steps are in their power to stir up the conscience of the civilized world against so fiendish and cruel a master as the Russian Government has proved itself to be."

WEYBRECHT GIRL DIES.

PALM BEACH, Fla., April 10.—Louise Weybrecht, 12 years old, who, with her mother, Mrs. O. W. Weybrecht, was shot by Frank V. Pierce here yesterday, died to-day. Mrs. Weybrecht is still alive, and it is said she has a fighting chance to recover.

The body of Pierce, who committed suicide after wounding the woman and her daughter, will be taken to St. Albans, Vt., where his mother lives, for burial. It is now believed he was insane.

LIFE SAVED BY THIRD DEGREE.

Juror Sure Boehm's "Confession" Was Forced Insisted on Minor Verdict.

Because one juror believed a confession had been obtained illegally by "third degree," Stephen Boehm was saved from the electric chair on Saturday, the jury bringing in a verdict of murder in the second degree.

Boehm was charged with the murder of Jacob Volz, in a stable at 160 East Eighty-seventh Street. He said on the stand that weak and half starved, he had been dragged before Capt. Carey of the Homicide Bureau and forced to repeat a confession put into his mouth by the detectives. He insisted he was not in the stable when the murder was committed. In his "confession," he had said he killed the man in a fit of anger, while the testimony of other witnesses at the trial was strong than he had killed the man from behind and apparently deliberately.

One juror of the nine believing him guilty, however, was so sure there was truth in his "third degree" confession, that he voted for a verdict of murder in the second degree. Three jurors voted for acquittal on the first ballot, but later yielded to the persuasion of the majority.

MANY AUTO SPEEDERS CAUGHT

Ten Chauffeurs Arrested in Upper Broadway—One in Times Square.

The police made many arrests of speeding automobile drivers yesterday, upper Broadway getting the lion's share of the grist.

James McCann, chauffeur for Anton Schwartz, a brewer, of 2 West Eighty-sixth Street, one of the first caught, was held in $300 bail for trial by Magistrate Kernochan, in the West Side Court. He was arrested yesterday morning at Broadway and Forty-ninth Street. In the car at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz and their daughter, Mrs. George Ruppert.

Policeman Geidman, who made the arrest, said the chauffeur crossed Times Square at the rate of twenty miles an hour.

Fletcher H. Sibley, a lawyer, of 500 Madison Avenue, was arrested by Motorcycle Policeman Faber early yesterday morning for speeding on Sixth Avenue, between Forty-seventh and Forty-third Streets. He was held for trial, as was Frederick Coates of 156 West Forty-sixth Street for a similar offense.

Ten chauffeurs and owners of cars were arrested on Broadway above 145th Street yesterday afternoon by policemen, who charged each with exceeding twenty miles an hour. They were arraigned in the West 152d Street station, and gave bail for their appearance in court this morning.

Lyttel G. Hunter of 19 Franklin Place, Flushing, who said he was a college student, was arrested at 122d Street and Riverside Drive for going at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

A high-powered automobile owned by David B. Ogden, a lawyer, of 12 East Tenth Street, crashed into an elevated railroad pillar at Sixth Avenue and Eighteenth Street, last night, throwing the chauffeur, Leo Krauss, in front of a Sixth Avenue surface car.

Quick action on the part of the motorman saved the chauffeur from being run over. When the car stopped the fender was touching the unconscious man. Krauss was taken to the New York Hospital, suffering from slight contusions and shock. The automobile was wrecked.

USING HYPNOTISM TO CURE DRUNKARDS

The Rev. Dr. Batten Has Made the Treatment a Part of His Church Extension Work.

STEADY DRINKER EASIEST

Few Backsliders Among His Patients, He Tells St. Mark's Congregation —The Lure of the Saloon.

The Rev. Dr. Loring W. Batten, rector of St. Mark's Church, at 232 East Eleventh Street, told the members of his congregation last night that their future donations will go into his new work of reclaiming drunkards by hypnotism.

Dr. Batten said that he had been experimenting with psychotherapeutic treatment for inebriates for several years, and had at last evolved a method which was infallable, with a record of fifty cures. All that is necessary, he said, is for the patient with the drink habit to wish for a cure, and the treatment open to him in the rector's study will do the rest.

Dr. Batten in outlining results on some of his fifty patients said that his cures were 100 per cent. perfect, but he added that there was one backslider who took a night off to celebrate when he was first pronounced cured. After his spree he came back for a post-graduate course, however, and finally left in a drinkproof condition. Another of the fifty backslid three times, and went on a debauch covering a period of two months, but he, too, repeated the hypnotic treatment, and was finally cured so completely that he fairly hated the sight of a beer glass.

The work of Dr. Batten with those whose will power has been broken down through drink began after a visit he made some years ago to the Bowery Mission.

"It is the steady drinker that is the easiest to cure," he said. "The man whose periods of debauchery are far apart is the difficult patient, and he most often becomes the backslider when the lust for drink once returns to test his fighting strength."

Dr. Batten said the chief enemy of his patients during the course of treatment was the fact that often, when they were able to resist two or three saloons on the way home, they were more than likely to meet a dozen or more, and that somewhere along between the eighth and the twelfth the power of auto suggestion from the open doors would be strong enough to lure them in.

"A woman telephoned me yesterday," he said, "and told me excitedly that her husband had come home dead drunk and they had him tucked away in bed. She wanted me to come right over and hypnotize him before he could wake up, and cure him.

"Now, I can't do that, nor could I help a man whose fellow-clubmen telephoned me to-day. The man was raving around in the club, I was told over the 'phone. They had him backed into a corner and were keeping him there till I could rush over, as they hoped, to lead him through a trance into sobriety.

"No, that's not the way I do it. I do not deeply hypnotize my patients. I procure a lightly hypnotic state and then force upon the patient mental suggestions against the evil. The usual course is from six to twelve lessons, and the only reason for hypnosis is that in that state the mind is more subject to mandatory suggestions.

"I never let a patient touch a drop after I start. Many people say that an old inebriate will go to pieces if drink is suddenly shut off, but in the case of a girl whom I cured I stopped her off short, and after three days without drink she looked and acted and seemed in very truth a re-created woman. Her youthful beauty returned to her, her mind resumed its former keenness, and she did not show a sign of any ill-effects of the sudden shutting off of her drink."

Dr. Batten said to reporters after completing his sermon that he had kept the work out of the newspapers up to now on account of its experimental nature, but that from now on he wished it to have publicity, as that might attract more patients to his study. He said the treatment would be given without cost as a part of the Church extension work.
